ANNUAL FAIR.

Ladies Sewing Circle of Third Universalist Church, North Weymouth, Holds Successful Two Days' Sale, in Church Vestry.

On Wednesday and Thursday, March 5 and 6, occurred the annual fair of the Ladies Sewing Circle connected with the Third Universalist church, North Weymouth.

The fair opened at 3 o'clock on Wednesday under the direction of Mrs. D. J. Sampson, president of the circle, for the sale from the different tables; useful and fancy articles being in charge of Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Kavanagh and Mrs. Kittredge; mysteries, Mrs. Miles Keene, Mrs. Jordan; grabs, Mrs. Morgan; cake, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Estes; candy, Mrs. Vining, Mrs. Nash.

Excellent lunches were served from 5 to 7 by Mrs. E. R. Sampson, Mrs. Hessey and Mrs. Holbrook. At 7.45, a fine program of songs, recitations and classes in spelling, arithmetic, geography, etc., was presented by North Weymouth talent.

The star of the evening and center of attraction was one year old Louise Baldwin Bailey, without doubt the youngest performer ever on the stage in North Weymouth.

At the close of the school the pupils and visitors presented the master, Ellhu Wilkins M. D., with a silk umbrella. Between the sessions piano duets were rendered by Miss Bertha Estes and Miss Doris Torrey and were well received.

On Thursday evening a drama in one act entitled "Oysters" was given by the following talent:

Betty (who gives a luncheon) Miss Viola Wolfe.
Miss Tabitha Tibbets (who has never tasted oysters) Miss Minnie Thayer.
Isabel (who brings stuffed olives) Miss Mary Hessey.
Bertha (who brings Saratoga chips) Evelyn Bailey.
Lillian (who brings pickled onions) Mary Ford.
Lucy (who goes to Boston for oysters) Bernice Stiles.

Miss Gladys L. Flieger of Quincy sang several selections and Miss Ida Horton of Campello gave recitations. Tower's orchestra of four pieces, Miss Doris Torrey, pianist and Henry Gooding, Percy Ames and John Tower were present and added much to the enjoyment. Much credit is due to the entertainment committee of which Mrs. George Ames was chairman.

A full house greeted each evening's entertainment and it was in every way a very successful fair.

MEN'S CLUB.

Annual Ladies' Night of C. M. A. Men's Club a Gala Event.

The annual ladies' night and regular monthly meeting of the C. M. A. Men's club was united in one on Wednesday evening and members of the club and their lady friends to the number of 118, enjoyed a delicious banquet and listened to a most interesting lecture, in the auditorium of the association building on Middle street, East Weymouth.

At six thirty o'clock the president of the club, Horace R. Drinkwater welcomed the members and lady friends and then all sat down to a tasty repast prepared by Mrs. Katherine Day and assistants and served by Herman Bates, Leo Fraher, Ralph Talbot, John Reis, Arthur Schultz, Earl Gifford, Reginald Bates, Bryon Leonard, Wendall Totman, Ralph Curtin, John Hunt, Albert Ahern, Ralph Chase, Morse Warren, James Fitzgerald, Harold Basile, Roy Wheaton and Joseph Coyle.

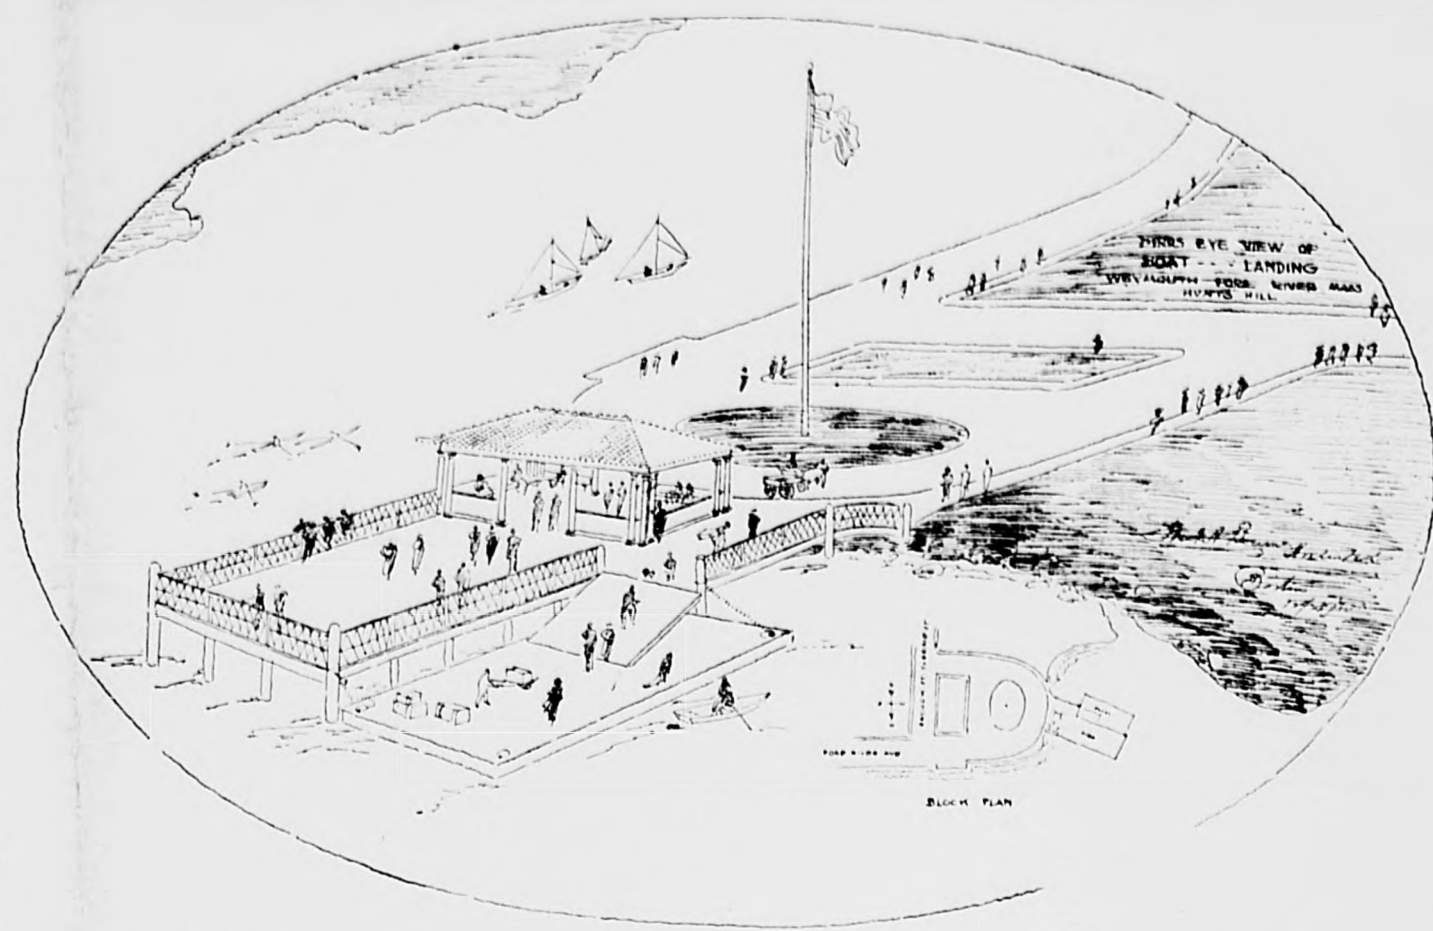

At the conclusion of the banquet the gathering was highly entertained by A. J. Philpott of Boston, with an illustrated lecture on "Aviation." Mr. Philpott is an expert on aerial navigation and with the many interesting slides, made a most decided hit with his audience and all enjoyed the address to the utmost.

UNION GLEE CLUB WINS.

Norfolk Club Pool and Billiard Teams Lose While Whist Squad Wins.

The Union Glee club of Rockland took the honors in the pool, billiard and whist contests with the Norfolk club of South Weymouth at the Glee club rooms in Rockland Tuesday evening. The Glee club boys won both pool matches. Winslow defeated Veazie 60 to 41 and Thomas vanquished Veazie 60 to 56. At billiards, the Rockland lads also finished ahead, Anderson defeating Reed 100 to 71 and Lewis winning from Robertson 100 to 71. At whist Rivinius and Nash saved the Norfolk squad from a complete whitewash by defeating Groce and Fletcher of Union Glee 5 plus, and the contest between Beal and Owens of Union and the Howe boys of Norfolk resulted in a tie.

Proposed Landing at North Weymouth

At a meeting of the Board of Trade

some time ago the matter of a public landing on our shore front was discussed and referred to a committee of which Walter B. Binnian was secretary.

The committee got busy and the matter will come before the Town Meeting next Monday. In the meantime we present to our reader a drawing of the proposed addition to our shore front and a part of the committee report which is as follows:

"At its first meeting your committee formed the opinion that a public landing should not be located above the Fore River bridge, because of the bridge itself, the swift tide, and the narrow winding channel, nor below the cove east of Great Hill, because of the inaccessibility of that district.

"Shortly after its organization your committee made a thorough inspection of the shore from the Fore River bridge to Great Hill and found but three locations, which deserved serious consideration in connection with a landing:

"(a) Dr. Welch's property immediately adjacent to the bridge. This was eliminated early, both on account of its cost and of the rapid flow of the river at that point.

"(b) Land at the eastern foot of Great Hill. This consists of a small triangular piece on the water side of the Fort Point road and could probably be purchased for about $500. The gradual slope of the land and the character of the beach in this cove makes it very suitable for bathing. It has the disadvantage, however, of being served by cars, from which persons would have to transfer to reach other parts of the town, and is moreover too far from the channel to be of much use as a public landing.

"(c) Hunt's hill, at Bay View, being the land on which Kennel's shipyard was formerly located and consisting of some 22,000 sq. ft. This plot is the best available for the purpose. It is practically on the channel and has, moreover, an entering channel already dredged out. Fore River Ave. terminates at the eastern line and the East Weymouth-Quincy car line runs within a ten minute walk from the shore, making the property easily accessible.

"This land was recently purchased by Messrs. Cox, Brown, Purdy, et al., for $3,500 mainly for the purpose of protecting their own neighboring dwellings against undesirable occupancy of the land. They are a public spirited body of men and altho they are now planning to erect a club house on the land, they have given members of your committee an impression that, if the town desired the land and would not put it to objectionable use, they would sell at a reasonable figure.

"Feeling that the Town of Weymouth should own an approach to the harbor, that such an approach would be useful as a landing at present and necessary to the town in the future, and feeling further, more that it can never be purchased cheaper than now, your committee unanimously recommends that the Board of Trade use its greatest influence toward bringing about the purchase of this property by the town at the next regular town meeting."

Weymouth Board of Trade.

The March meeting of the Weymouth Board of Trade was held last night, as usual, at the Clapp Memorial building and was a well attended one.

The president, E. W. Hunt, was in the chair and the first business report of committee in which the executive committee reported the following standing committees:

The warrant for the Town meeting was next taken up. E. W. Hunt was elected moderator and many of the articles discussed to quite a length but our limited time this morning forbids details but at the approach of the time of adjournment on motion of R. B. Worster the Board of Trade voted to stand by the appropriation committee at the Town meeting next Monday.

Open Meeting.

The Men's Brotherhood of the Pilgrim church of North Weymouth held an open meeting in the church vestry on Tuesday evening of this week. John J. White of Chicago was a special guest and delivered an address on "The Single Tax." A question box conducted by Mr. White was an interesting feature. A social hour with refreshments followed.

HUNT SCHOOL FIVE CHAMPIONS

James Humphrey School Team Loses 12 to 8 in Play Off for First Place in Grammar School League Last Friday.

What proved to be the finest and most exciting basketball game seen in town for many months, was played in the C. M. A. gym, East Weymouth, last Friday afternoon, when the Hunt school of Weymouth Landing defeated the James Humphrey school quintet 12 to 8 in the play off of the tie in the grammar school league just closed.

Both teams were primed for the fray and at four o'clock when Referee Fabyan blew his whistle for the start of the all important game, both sides were confident of victory. At the very start, Alexander, the husky back of the Humphrey school was

DANCING CLASS RECEPTION.

Town Hall, East Weymouth Scene of Pleasing Children's Ball Under Direction of M. Louise Merritt Polley Last Friday Evening.

One of the prettiest and most attractive annual events of Weymouth's social season is the annual reception of the dancing class taught by Mrs. Louise Merritt Polley which was held this year, on last Friday evening in the Town Hall, East Weymouth.

At seven o'clock, the time for the starting of the program of the evening, every seat in the spacious hall was taken and many were standing, on the main floor and in the balcony.

The first event on the list was the annual grand march and cleveland circle. The grand march this year was led by Master Frederick Roach and Miss Madeline Betts, both of Quincy. This couple was followed by Master Frank Rand of North Weymouth and Miss Jennie Gibbs of Quincy, and the members of the class.

After this came a two-step for the young folks, to be followed by a waltz-german.
The fourth number was a very pretty dutch dance, with Miss Marion Nash and Miss Dorothy Dasha as participants.

The "Gypsy Mazurka" came next and then the class enjoyed the ever popular lancers.

The seventh dance, entitled the "Jockey Dance" was one of the decided features on the program of the evening. Those who took part in this dance were the Misses Linnehan, Leonard Coolidge, Betts Roache, Holbrook, Kennison, Howe, Ti-dale, Pratt and Miss May L. Allen as the trainer.

After the several encores of this dance had been given, Miss Esther Leonard of East Weymouth, danced the "Glide Eccentric" much to the pleasure of the audience and then the class enjoyed the cross-step schottische.

Miss May L. Allen of Weymouth, who needs no introduction to Weymouth audience, danced the "La Sorella" in her usual faultless and captivating manner.

The "Gavotte" was taken up by the class after which the dairy maids and hay-makers in costume gave a pleasing selection.

Miss Esther Leonard again came to the fore and charmingly gave a character dance, followed by the "Merry-Go-Round Gavotte" which took up the attention of the entire class.

"Fancy Little Nancy" in the person of Miss Helen Linnehan drew a round of applause from the gathering and then the class again entertained with the "Tandem."

The advanced class presented the "Garden of Love Waltz" and Miss Allen danced the "Arcadian Dance" being forced to respond to many encores before the audience was appeased.

The matinee schottische by the entire class came next and the children's part of the program was concluded with a dainty colonial "Pirouette Minuet," danced by the Misses Carter, Betts, Gibbs, Jones, Allen, Munroe, Betts and Kennison in colonial costume.

After this highly enjoyed dance, intermission was declared and ice cream was served by C. M. Price of Weymouth.

The matrons were Mrs. W. N. Betts and Mrs. J. C. Holbrook.

Mrs. Fannie Merchant presided at the piano for the young folks' dancing.

The hall was tastefully decorated with streamers of pink and white and the stage was set off with potted plants, ferns, cut flowers and crepe paper effects.

At nine o'clock the young folks and their "grown up" friends and relatives were invited to dance, with Shaw's orchestra of five pieces furnishing music.
At twelve o'clock the last waltz was held and then special cars conveyed the dancing class members and their guests to their many homes in this and surrounding towns.

Guests were present from Wollaston, Alston, Boston, Quincy, Braintree, Hingham, Rockland and the Weymouths.

Mrs. Polley directed the whole affair and deserves much credit for the delightful dancing class reception of 1913.

OLD COLONY CLUB.

Large Attendance at Meeting of Club in Vestry of Union Church, South Weymouth, Last Thursday Afternoon.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Old Colony Ladies' Club in the chapel of the Union church in South Weymouth, last Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Frederick G. Bauer presided, Mrs.
Margaret Deland read two of her own compositions, "Immediate Jewel" and
"The Coming of the Saint." Miss Grace Gilman sang a group of songs accompanied by Miss Margaret Howe. Rev. R.
Rerry Bush who was scheduled to appear and talk of "Panama and the Great Canal," was indisposed and unable to be present.
It is expected that he will appear at a meeting of the club in April.

Comfort in the Thought.
Patricia possesses the four-year-old's usual aversion to water for cleansing purposes and is most sparing of its application to her small face. The other evening before going to bed she gave her reflection in the mirror a careful scrutiny and remarked: "Well, my face is pretty clean. I believe it'll do for tomorrow."

sium, East Weymouth, last Saturday

rector of the C. M. A., and he was respon-

(The following letter by Nellie H. Fox describes the Christmas festivities at Ukhrol, Assam. Rev. and Mrs. Fox sailed from Boston, September 15, 1911, to take charge of the Mission Station at Ukhrol, Assam. They arrived at their station about January 1, 1912.)

Ukhrol, Manipus, Assam.
January 15, 1913

Dear Friends:—

Perhaps you would like to know how we spent our first Christmas in Ukhrol.
The day began bright and fair and cold, like the October days at home. As I opened the door on to the veranda about eight o'clock in the morning, I was greeted by a bright little fellow who has often seemed to me to reflect the sunlight and he surely did this Christmas morning.
In one hand he held a chicken, a salaam for the menzabib—a gift for me—and in the other two piece with which he wished to buy a paper.

We ate our breakfast rather hurriedly for the day's program was to be a full
one. At eleven o'clock came the marriage of our four school teachers. The brides, three of our school girls and one from the village, came to the bungalow on their way, and I arranged a little bouquet of roses and green for each one. They looked very nice in all white except the village girl who wore the regular red and blue striped skirt and cloth with fancy colored design on blue.

As we neared the school house we saw the grooms approaching all dressed in their best, trousers, vest, shirt, coat, shoes and stockings. Two wore white.
I am sure the cut and fit did not worry them, but really they looked very well.
Mr. Fox had made them a present of a white lawn tie and their efforts were only partly successful with the bow knot. The school room was prettily decorated with vines and ferns and as they entered they took their places in the front of the room on two benches. First came a song which was followed by the Lord's Prayer in anglo and prayer by Mr. Fox in English.
The four couples then stood and the ceremony was performed. This was Mr. Fox's first public reading in Tangkhul and it was with fear and trembling.

These four couples have taken up their residence on the Compound. Their houses are very simple, the frame work being made of small wood from the jungle, filled in between with reeds plastered with mud and a roof of thatch. In the morning about nine o'clock came the wedding breakfast. Everyone on the Compound, school boys and all enjoyed a royal feast on pig.

We did not reach home until nearly two o'clock and sat down to a very simple lunch including our usual chicken, potatoes, tomatoes from our garden, mince pie (canned) etc.

At 2:30 came the sports on the school playground. They included a game of football between the Mission Compound and Ukhrol boys, foot races, running high jump and low jump.

In the evening the people here enjoyed their first Christmas tree. It was decorated with candles, fancy balls and a little package for each containing an orange, a few pieces of candy and a few peanuts.
To the eleven girls I gave a cake of scented soap and for the children on the compound (15) in number, I made little bags of mosquito net and put in candy.

Mr. Fox is working on the translation of Genesis with the teachers and a few others who know English, as the Sunday school lessons are all from the Old Testament and no work has been done previously on that part of the bible.

We are still enjoying the work here and find the days far too short to do what we would like. This is the only Christian community among the thousands of Tangkhul Nagas, and much work remains to be done.

Sincerely,
NELLIE H. FOX

Reports from the training camp at Southern Pines, N. C., of the Philadelphia National league baseball club, state that Dan Howley, the East Weymouth boy, who is receiving his first big league tryout, has made a great hit with Manager Charlie Dooin by the clever way he handles himself behind the plate.

Howley has been getting his throws away fast, but as yet has not tried to put any speed on the ball. Dan has been batting in fine shape and if he continues to show the class he has thus far displayed, he will be seen behind the bat in many games this season.

Bear Baiting Popular Sport.
Few sports have had such a great and extended popularity as bear baiting. The Romans imported their bears from Britain, and the sport can be traced in England to the Conquest or beyond. Queen Elizabeth was so fond of the sport that, by an order in council, she prohibited "plays to be performed on Thursdays because bear baiting and such pastimes had usually been practiced."

The Ruby Necklace

"She Paid the Price"

By CLARISSA MACKIE

On the night of Edith Palmer's birth day ball her husband came home early and sought his wife in her own room. His handsome face was aglow with love and admiration as he took the lovely form in his arms and kissed her eager, red lips.

"Darling, you are more beautiful every time I see you," he murmured.

"And you grow more blind," she chided him playfully. "I have been waiting for you to come and tell me what jewels I shall wear tonight." She turned to the dressing table and threw back the lid of a jewel box and removed the trays. Diamonds, sapphires and emeralds blazed in the light.

"Wear your rubies, Edith," said Dick Palmer, with a mysterious smile.

"Rubies? Don't tease, Dick. Those are the only stones I really want and do not possess. Shall I be diamonds?"

"Rubies tonight," insisted Dick, and from an inner pocket of his coat he drew forth a flat leather case and placed it in her hands.

"Dick Palmer, you darling!" cried Edith, and she showered kisses upon him before she opened the box. When she finally threw back the lid she was awed by the beauty of the stones her husband had selected for her birthday gift.

On a bed of white velvet was coiled a magnificent necklace of flawless rubies, perfect in color and each stone the size of a very large pea.

Dick lifted the necklace and clasped it around his wife's neck; then he stood back to admire the rich red circle of fire against the whiteness of her skin.

"You dear, extravagant boy!" murmured Edith as she turned to the mirror to feast her eyes on the jewel. "I suppose you paid an enormous price for it."

"I paid a pretty stiff price, but I guess it's worth it. I didn't buy it in Buffalo's. It isn't a brand new necklace; neither is it reconstructed from an old one. It's a genuine antique said to have belonged to an Asiatic ruler."

"Where did you find it, Dick?"

"In Lenquith's on Fourth avenue. I've had it a month now, and Buffalo has been cleaning it up for me. Well, I must run away and dress." Dick kissed his wife again and left the room.

Edith stood long before the mirror watching the liquid flame of the ruby necklace as she slowly turned her neck. At last she unclasped it and replaced it within its case.

"I'll not wear it down to dinner. It will be a surprise for all of them when the ball begins," she said to herself and looked around for a place in which to secret the case. The large jewel box would just fit into the tiny steel safe sunk in the wall near the chimney. Before the inconspicuous door there was hung a heavily framed square painting, which could be moved aside only by pressing a knob on the other side of the room.

Now Edith selected a diamond bracelet—a dazzling serpent with ruby eyes—and slipped it on her arm. Then she closed and locked the large jewel box, pressed the knob that moved aside the square picture and placed the box in the little safe. There was room after all for the new jewel case containing the ruby necklace, and after another glimpse of the beautiful jewel Edith tucked that in the safe, closed the steel door, replaced the picture and went down to dinner just as the gong sounded.

The rooms were bowers of loveliness. A separate color scheme had been selected for each one, and the whole harmonized in one glorious arrangement of flowers and palms.

There were several people staying at the Palmers', and most of them were gathered in the drawing room when Edith entered, the Maxfields, husband and wife; Eugenia Card, an old school friend of Edith's, and Dick's father, Henry Palmer. The fifth guest, Mme. Geulot had not yet joined them.

Just as the last strokes of the hall clock died away there was a rustle of silk that hesitated outside the door, and then Mme. Geulot came swiftly in, her bright coloring enhanced by two vivid crimson poinsettias at her breast. Her rich blue-black hair was coiled in a soft knot at the back of her shapely head, and above her low, thoughtful brow was placed a coronet of diamonds. Mme. Geulot was a very beautiful woman.

"A thousand pardons, cherie," she cried penitently. "That so stupid Marie of mine has made what you call a muddle of my toilet." She threw out her hands with a graceful gesture of despair, and her long dark eyes darted from one smiling face to another.

Mrs. Palmer shook her charming head and looked at the vision in amber satin and diamonds. "Dear Mme. Geulot," she said sweetly, "if you want to part with Marie I shall be delighted to relieve you of your stupid treasure."

"No, no!" And they all laughed at madame's dismay.

In spite of the forthcoming ball the dinner was as perfect as it always had been since Pierre Caron had ruled in the Palmer kitchen. When the meal was concluded Edith went upstairs to complete her toilet, leaving her guests scattered about the flower decked rooms.

As she went up the stairway to the next floor two faces peered at her from a curtained alcove—two dark faces with cunning eyes—but so contrasting were their conditions in life that had you coupled their names the world would have laughed at you.

After dismissing her maid Edith locked the door of her room and hastened to open the wall safe, where her jewels were secreted. She started back with a little cry of dismay, for the box containing the ruby necklace had disappeared.

She recovered herself almost instantly. "Of course Dick had taken it out to show his father, but how did he know it was there? He guessed it, as I did not wear it at dinner," she said as she closed the safe, picked up her gloves and fan and went down to the drawing room, outwardly composed. Her brain was a chaos of doubt and perplexity. She dreaded to ask her husband about the necklace. She was afraid to hear his answer.

Dick met her at the door of the drawing room. "Where is the necklace?" he asked quickly.

She paled to the lips. "Then you did not take it from the safe?" she gasped.

"No, of course not. I didn't know it was there."

"Then it has been stolen!" And she related the circumstances.

He frowned. "Where is Jeanne?"

"She was in my room when I returned to it after dinner. I dismissed her then."

"It happened at dinner," he said convincingly. "I'll ring up a detective. He can come as a guest. Don't mention the matter to any one."

"No," said Edith, and went to receive the first arrivals.

In spite of the loss of the ruby necklace the birthday ball was a distinct success. No one would have surmised from the sweet composure of the hostess that she had suffered a great loss. Many complimented her on the loveliness of her appearance, and others added that she needed no jewels to enhance her beauty.

Dick Palmer introduced a slim, dark haired man in correct evening attire as the detective, Mr. Bleek, and in a few crisp questions he drew from Edith all the facts surrounding the theft of the ruby necklace.

"Bleek suggests a guest in the house," said Dick later to his wife as they stood alone together.

"Impossible!" said Edith. "The Maxfields are above suspicion. Eugenia could buy forty ruby necklaces. Your father—absurd! It must have been one of the extra servants."

"Jeanne?" asked her husband quietly.

"Oh, Jeanne is too much of a coward to attempt anything big like that. She might purloin a collar—in fact, she has a passion for collars and handkerchiefs, but not jewels."

"You have not mentioned our other guest, Edith," said Dick quietly.

She made a gesture of dismay and searched the room with her eyes. "Mme. Geulot! Oh, Dick! I know you have warned me against my intimacy with her, when my acquaintance with her is so slight. But her letters from Paris were genuine, and she is so delightful! I wonder where she is. I have not seen her since dinner."

"I will search for her," said Dick quietly and was gone.

When he made his reappearance the last of the guests were taking departure, and when they were alone he placed his arm around his wife's slender form.

"Dear," he said, "be prepared for an unpleasant shock. The ruby necklace has been traced to Mme. Geulot. Detective Bleek found the jewel case on the person of our cook, Pierre Caron who has confessed that the robbery was one of many that he and his wife, Celeste Geulot—none other, my dear—had planned. It seems she saw you trying on the necklace after I had left you, watched you hide it away and when you had left the room slipped in, secured the rubies, concealed them in her room and went down late to dinner."

"After dinner Pierre, her husband, went to her and demanded the necklace. She refused to give it to him then, and he took the empty case and went below, furious at her. She is now in her room or has escaped with the necklace. Will you go to her room and see if she is there? I want to avoid the servants knowing of the affair if possible."

Edith went to the door of Mme. Geulot's room and tapped lightly. There was no response to her summons or to louder knocking. Then Bleek set his shoulder to the door, and the lock gave way. He peered inside and then sprang within. The Palmers followed, gravely apprehensive.

Mme. Geulot was there. She was sitting before a cheval glass in all the regal splendor of her amber satin ball gown. About her throat was clasped the ruby necklace.

She was dead.

Bleek stepped forward and unclasped the necklace and examined it closely. "That's the way with many of these Asiatic babbles," he said thoughtfully. "I happen to have heard of this one before. There is a large reward out for it. There is a legend that if it is honestly bought or sold or presented as a gift it is quite harmless. If it is stolen the wearer pays the price, as Mme. Geulot has done, poor soul!"

He pointed to the throat of the dead woman, where a heavy black mark encircled the whiteness of her neck.

"It grew tighter and finally strangled her," he explained as they went away and closed the door behind them. "That's an Asiatic trick, too," he said.

But Edith and her husband were not listening. Edith was weeping bitterly. She was grieving for the friend who had proved false and who had paid the price.

No. 73.

The Bride and the Boy.

[Written for the Gazette and Transcript.]

"Well of all things!" began the Benedict.

The Boy turned toward the doorway and the Bride held up a warning finger. Her expression plainly said, "Leave him to me." What the Bride heard was merely,

"I'm busy now, Jack; I'll see you presently in the parlor."

The Benedict took the hint. Consumed with curiosity, he wandered about the house waiting for the Bride to explain. He lingered in the hall shamelessly eavesdropping, but what he heard (something about a violin) gave him no clue to unravel the mystery of the presence in his den of a ragged, unkempt boy with dirty hands, and eyes half timid, half defiant.

Presently the Bride called him.

"Do you think," she asked when he appeared, "that we can find work about the place that this Boy could do Saturday mornings?"

The Benedict thought it extremely doubtful.

The Bride's eyes begged, "Please do," and he reconsidered. Possibly the Boy could remove ashes and later keep the paths and lawn in order.

"Could you?" asked the Bride.

"You bet!" from the Boy.

"Then come next Saturday morning, but remember what I told you about your hair and your hands."

"You -- Yes!" corrected the Boy as he started for the door.

The Bride watched him down the walk and laughed to see him examining his hands as he went.

"That Boy's all right," she told the Benedict.

"I'm glad Alice sent him here. He is one of her sixth graders and a conundrum in some ways. She thinks he doesn't get much attention at home, and I guess she's right."

"How did she happen to send him here?" the Benedict wanted to know.

"She found out he wanted to earn some money so she encouraged him to believe he could get some odd jobs here. You never guess, Jack, what he wants to buy."

"A violin," ventured the Benedict.

"You must have heard us talking for you'd hardly have guessed it yourself."

"Oh, I don't know. His hair is already of quite a musical length."

"Isn't it shocking?" laughed the Bride, carefully polishing the arm of the chair where the Boy's grimy fingers had nervously traced geometric designs while he answered her questions. "I told him if he was to work for me he'd have to keep his hair cut and show me a clean pair of hands when he came."

"Do you think you can get any work out of him?"

"Never fear! He'll work for me because he likes me, and he'll let me correct his careless ways because he knows that I like him."

"You are a courageous woman to undertake to make anything of such raw material, beloved."

"Why? It is the simplest thing in the world! He is raw enough, I'll admit, but if he is willing to work for what he wants that's one good thing about him; and some day you may be no end proud of my Boy."

"Oh, if he's going to amount to something fine, I may decide to take a hand in his training myself."

"You may!" exclaimed the Bride.

"Now, that's just the difference between a man's judgement and a woman's intuition. I can see there's good in him, in the rough; you will have to wait till you see proof of it."

Old Colony Gas Co.

The Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners has authorized the Old Colony Gas Company to issue at par $146,000. First Mortgage 5 percent bonds and 2210 shares of stock par value $100., a total of $367,000 of securities, to enable the company to pay off its indebtedness incurred for construction during the year 1912.

The above amount makes the total authorized capital as follows:

First Mortgage 5 percent bonds $338,000

Preferred Stock 254,500

Common Stock 254,500

Total $847,000

The officers of the company are well satisfied with the substantial business developed in the short period of one year since operation began and with the excellent outlook for securing a large number of additional consumers in the five towns now covered by its mains. Not earnings for the first six months of the present fiscal year beginning July 1, 1912, are reported over twice interest charges on present outstanding bonds.

During 1912 the Gas Company reports having laid 32 miles of mains, bringing its total mileage to 84, and erected a 750,000 cubic foot storage holder to meet the growing needs of its business.

Its plant at East Braintree on Fore River was completed December 1911, when gas was turned on to supply Braintree, Weymouth, Rockland, Abington and Whitman.

With its territory only about 25 percent developed, it connected over 2200 consumers last year, which it is expected, will at least be doubled during 1913.

E. M. Farnsworth & Company, who are financing this enterprise, state that they have purchased the above bonds and will shortly offer them for sale.

There are eight long months to the November election and Mr. John J. McDevitt whom we (?) chose to represent the First Norfolk District in the Senate of the Massachusetts Legislature has got to "get a move on himself" to repair the breach he recently made if he expects to receive the usual second term.

A business man and a Town man. Elsewhere in this issue is the notice of Everett Lound that his store will close for Town Meeting next Monday from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. This is a good hint for all factories and stores. "Business is Business" and there is no more important business for the citizens of Weymouth than its Town business. Let us have a full meeting and handle the 106 articles in the Warrant in a manner which will do credit to the Town of Weymouth.

The town election for the year 1913 is now a matter of record and in the main the expected happened and barring a few exceptions is as near satisfactory as such events usually result. Ward 5 is however without a member of the Board of Selectmen, a condition which is liable to occur any year to any Ward, when there are more than five nominees on the ticket, which of course, emphasizes the unwisdom of dividing any one Ward's vote between two popular candidates, each with a large following. Mr. Hanley the newly elected member of the Board is a native of Weymouth, a successful business man and a man of ideas.

The School Board contest was a hotly waged affair and resulted in placing a new man on the list. Mr. Leonard, the winner, while not a native of Weymouth, has for several years been a citizen and a tax payer, with large business interest and no doubt good results will come by his association with other members of the School Committee.

Robert S. Hoffman will be a new man on the Water Board and while it may take him some time to get as familiar with all the minutiae as was the retiring member D.M. Easton, he has demonstrated by his development and improvement of the M. C. Dizer estate that whatever he puts his hands to must and will be made better if possible.

is the greatest of modern-time helps to perfect cake and biscuit making. Makes home baking pleasant and profitable. It renders the food more digestible and guarantees it safe from alum and all adulterants.

By the vote Weymouth is still a no licensed town and we thank those who read the Gazette of last week and took themselves out of the list of "blank" voters and while the total vote was several hundred more than for the year 1912 the blanks were much less and the majority for no license proportionally increased. If only 8 of the 71 "blanks" in Precinct 3 had voted No, that Precinct would have stood with the majority. There is one vital thing now to be done. Let the Police Officers make good their pledges when they asking to be put under the Civil Service Law and close up the unlicensed houses and pocket saloons.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

The column under this title will be given to the people for a free discussion of any and all subjects; the management of the paper distinctly disclaiming all responsibility for the opinions here expressed.

We wish to call the attention of the Voters of Weymouth to Article 7 in the Warrant relating to the teachers' salaries.

The plan suggested for the increase of $150 over the present salary makes it necessary for a teacher to have taught five years in Weymouth before getting the maximum salary of $700.

When one considers the length of time needed for preparation for the teaching profession, and the expense attached to the same, this is no more than a fair wage.

At the present time the neighboring towns of Rockland and Abington are paying their teachers a maximum salary of $700; Quincy $650, with a petition now out for $750, while the little town of Cohasset pays its teachers $650.

The increase cost of living is felt by the teachers as by everyone else, and this can be rightly met only by an increase in their earnings.

The part of the question of most interest to the voters is—how much will this affect the present tax-rate?

It has been figured that an appropriation of $3,000 will be sufficient for this increase, graded, as it is, planned; and at the highest, the tax will not be increased more than sixteen cents on the thousand, so it will not fall heavily on any taxpayer.

Permanent Pleasure

Now is the winter of our discontent Made glorious by some passing event; The birth of a boy or a girl or two, Who add to our joys or troubles renew.

Perchance a wedding where the bride and groom Drive from our hearts some misipient gloom;

Perhaps it may be but a passing show, But our hearts are filled with transient glow.

But a permanent pleasure may abound, Right here in East Weymouth, it now is found;

If you will but join the increasing crowd, Who speak the praises of Whitcomb aloud.

His Graham Bread is a pleasure to all, And for his Hot Rolls his trade ever call;

And his star cup cake are growing in favor, To buy at sight you never would waver.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

A spirited debate was held in the high school hall on Tuesday afternoon from 12.30 to 2 o'clock, six boys of the senior class being the participants. The debate was on the subject "Resolved, That a Literacy Test Should Be Required of All Immigrants Coming to the United States." The affirmative side of the question was upheld by Herman Bates, Fred Philbrick and Urban Nolan, while John Dizer, William Reid and Richard Lyons talked on the negative side of the matter. The judges were Miss Cunningham, Miss Hearty and Miss Smith of the faculty and they decided that the arguments presented by Messrs Dizer, Reid and Lyons were the most convincing and forcible. All the speakers assumed their parts in the debate extremely well and it is hoped that more of this kind of work will be carried on in the schools in the future.

What has become of the agitation in favor of attempting to secure another high school dance in the near future? Every one seems to want another dance, especially among the pupils of the school and their near friends outside. Get started athletic association or senior class, before it gets to warm, if you want another dance.

The members of the senior history division, who will later on in the year, take up the study of civics, are to be given permission by the authorities, to attend the annual March town meeting next Monday in the town hall.

A much abused lawn of a property owner near the school has been the cause of a business deal between the pupils of the school and Mr. Hilton, the school principal. For several years, the master of the school has had a severe struggle to keep the scholars from racing "pell-mell" across this lawn, annoying the residents of the estate and spoiling the grass. Recently Mr. Hilton decided to strike a bargain with his charges and it was agreed that every one who crossed the lawn should contribute five cents for each offence, to the treasury of the athletic association. Since the idea was adopted it is said, that the athletic association treasury is not doing a very large receiving business, so the lawn must be experiencing a much needed rest from the hurry and wear and tear of pupils who have been over anxious to get home from school. We congratulate Mr. Hilton on stopping a decidedly disagreeable daily occurrence.

The athletic association of the school met in room 3 on Wednesday afternoon and talked over several matters of importance. The president, Lewis Nolan presided. The idea of raising funds for the support of the baseball nine this spring was taken up, and among other plans, a committee of twelve members of the school was selected to solicit funds by public subscription. This committee consists of Arthur Sampson, H. Kelson, Leo Fraher, Bryon Leonard, Carleton Murphy, Norman Walker, Urban Nolan, Harold Burrell, Mills Baker and J. Healey. Therefore Mr. Business Man, be prepared for a visit from some member of this committee and when they call, show them that you are interested in your high school by contributing generously and in this way helping to make the baseball season of 1913 a grand success for the pupils of Weymouth high.

A "town meeting" was held in Room 6

yesterday by the members of the history division of the senior class and a discussion of several articles in the warrant for the annual town meeting of next Monday was held.

Mr. Hilton called the meeting to order and article one, to choose a moderator for said meeting was taken up and Lewis Nolan elected to preside. Miss Alice O'Connor was chosen as clerk of the meeting.

Article 7, in regard to raising and appropriating money to increase to $700 the maximum salary of all teachers in its elementary schools, was taken up and the motion to do so, carried after affirmative arguments by Mr. Hilton and Mr. Burrell.

Article 8, in regard to highways was highly interesting. Mr. Wagner spoke on the subject and was in favor of spending the sum of $55,000 for better squares and principle thoroughfares. The motion to this effect was carried by a large majority.

Article 9, for street oiling and watering was taken up and after much live arguing, a motion was carried to provide for oiling and watering the streets the coming year.

Article 16, By request of the committee on New Lockup in Ward Two: to see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate the sum of $5,500 for new police station etc, Miss Tirrell was given the floor, and she suggested, that as long as the town owned the Franklin school building and land, she thought this place should be remodeled into a police station, instead of erecting a new one. Urban Nolan strenuously objected to a central police station in Jackson square, preferring a side street as a more suitable place. After several more well founded speeches on the subject the motion to do as the committee recommended was voted on and carried.

Article 36 in regard to water meters was the most interesting of the session. Mr. Healey and Mr. Nolan were against installing meters. These gentlemen with several others stated that the sum of $5,000 asked for could be used to a better advantage if new mains were laid and a better force be provided. The North Weymouth members at the meeting were against installing meters, as they claim the money had better be spent to put larger pipes and providing better force at the north end of the town. This article was not carried the side against the installing of meters, winning out by two votes. On that question Mr. Hilton spoke in favor of the meters, while Lewis Nolan and Mr. Fearing were very much against the article.

Article 47 was taken up and it was voted to grant the request of the Weymouth Board of Trade for a public landing on the North Weymouth water front.

Article 54, in regard to better school facilities in Ward 1 was taken up. Lewis Nolan spoke in favor of an addition to the Athens school, rather than the erection of a new school house. Others spoke in favor of this idea and as there was no opposition, the motion to make an addition to the present Athens school, was voted on and carried.

Article 66, to see if the town will instruct its Board of Water Commissioners to reopen Weymouth Great Pond to the residents of Weymouth for boating and fishing. Miss Doble presented a very able argument in favor of boating and fishing in the pond and had facts and figures galore to back up her statements. Mr. Philbrick also spoke in favor of reopening the pond for the residents of Weymouth to boat and fish upon. Urban Nolan and William Reid very loudly objected to the granting of the article, but by a small vote, the article was carried.

All the pupils who spoke were very well versed on their subjects of discussion and all who attended the W. H. S. "town meeting," declare they will be on hand Monday at the town hall to see if their elders can present any better arguments than were presented yesterday at the high school.

SAVING THE SCENE

An Emergency For Which Actors Must Ever Be Prepared.

ACTS NOT ON THE PLAYBILLS.

Presence of Mind by Which Clara Morris Turned to Advantage a Canine Interruption in "Miss Multon" and a Feline Intrusion in "Camille."

An experienced actor is supposed to be able to cope with any stage emergency, no matter what is lacking or what happens. Cool, self possessed, it is expected of him to turn the ridiculous into a source of applause rather than of disapproval or laughter.

And among the necessary requirements for the actress is an unshakable self control, no matter if by some carelessness she is thrown into a situation almost without precedent. She must never fly off at a tangent because of some unheeded incident. She must not scream when the perfunctory gallery idiot yells "Fire!" If something is forgotten she must try hard to hide its absence or invent a substitute.

If anything unusual occurred I always tried to incorporate it into the play if possible, as when in the school-room scene of "Miss Multon" I was astonished to see a large water spout come trotting on to the stage, waving his tail at me as if we had been bosom friends for years. I don't like to recall all the things I thought about that dog for a moment or two.

Then I rose, and, thanking heaven and a generous master for the collar he wore, I grasped it, and, having stroked his silky ear with the other hand, I said to my pupils: "Children, I do not wish to curtail your pleasures, but I have told you before that I cannot permit you to have your pets in this room during lesson hours. Now, don't force me to remind you of that again."

And the little girl who played Paul quickly and cleverly responded to my wink. "Oh, excuse us this time, Miss Multon, and we won't do it again." And, taking the dog from me, she led him off into the retirement of private life, while in the morning one newspaper remarked that "among the prettiest of the lighter touches of the performance was the scene at the Christmas tree in the first act and the dog scene in the third act."

Another time, in Baltimore, when I was playing "Camille," I had a similar experience. In the fifth act I had staggered from the window to the bureau, nearing that dread moment when I was to see the reflection of my wrecked and ruined self in the looking glass. The house was all attention, watching dimly the piteous, weak movements of the dying woman. Just then I heard the quick indrawing of the breath that startled womanhood always indulges in before either a scream or a laugh.

My heart gave a plunge. "What is it? Oh, what is wrong?" And I glanced down at myself anxiously, for really I wore very little in that scene. "What is it?"

Then came a titter, and evidently it was growing. In agony I turned quickly about and found myself facing a monstrous cat. Startled, he held the very center of the stage, his two great topaz eyes fixed unflinchingly upon my face. His tail stood straight and aggressively in the air, twitching with short twitches at the very top.

Alas, no wonder they giggled! But how to save the approaching death scene was what went through my mind.

Clinging to the bureau, I slipped to my knees, and with an earnest prayer that he would not resist my appeal in a faint voice I called him to me. Thomas looked suspiciously at me, hesitated, then approached gingerly and sniffed at my fingers. Then he rubbed his dingy body against my knee, and in an instant my arms were about him, my cheek on his wicked old head. What a sigh of relief went like a wave over that audience! I had won!

I then called Nanine to relieve me, and the applause that swept the house was as balm to my great distress. I said to Nanine, "Take him downstairs; he grows too heavy for me to pet." And Sir Thomas was carried off reluctantly, imagining perhaps that I was envious of the hit he had made.

My manager, who was somewhat of a wag, of course made the most of the saved situation. A gentleman met him on the street the next morning and was anxious for him to settle an argument between himself and wife.

"My wife, who has seen the play several times in New York, insists that the beautiful little scene with the cat belongs to the play, while I don't recall it, nor do any of our acquaintances whom I have asked this morning. Won't you kindly set us right?" "Willingly," replied my manager. "Your wife is in the right, my dear sir. That cat scene is always done. It is a great favorite with Miss Morris, and she hails that cat all over the country with her."

May heaven forgive him!—Clara Morris in New York Press.

Inquisitive. "What is your name?" asked one five-year-old miss of another. "My goodness!" exclaimed the other. "You are as bad as grownup folks. They are always asking my name and a lot of other silly questions until I am actually ashamed of them."—Chicago News

CHAPTER XXVI.

Wherein Philip Finds Elnora.

"I need my own violin," cried Elnora. "This one may be a thousand times more expensive and much older than mine, but it wasn't inspired and taught to sing by a man who knew how."

The guests in the O'More music room laughed appreciatively. "Why don't you write your mother to come for a visit and bring yours?" suggested O'More.

"I did that three days ago," acknowledged Elnora. "I am half expecting her on the noon boat. That is one reason why this violin gets worse every minute. There is nothing at all the matter with me."

Elnora laid away the violin. "Come along, children," she said. "Let's race to the playhouse."

With the brood at her heels Elnora ran, and for an hour lively sounds stole from the remaining spot of forest on the island, which lay beside the O'More cottage. Then young Terry went to the playroom to bring Alice her doll. He came racing back, dragging it by one leg and crying. "There's company! Some one has come that mamma and papa are just tearing down the house over. He's sick. I saw through the window."

Before Elnora missed her, Alice, who had gone to investigate, came flying across the shadows and through the sunshine waving a paper. She thrust it into Elnora's hand.

"There is a man person—a stranger person!" she shouted. "But he knows you! He sent you that! You are to be the doctor! He said so! Oh, do hurry! I like him heaps!"

Elnora read Edith Carr's telegram to Philip Ammon and understood that he had been ill; that she had been located by Edith, who had notified him. In so doing she had acknowledged defeat. At last Philip was free. Elnora went to him with a radiant face.

"Are you sure, at last, runaway?" asked Philip Ammon.

"Perfectly sure!" cried Elnora.

"Will you marry me now?"

"This instant! That is, any time after the noon boat comes in."

"Why such unnecessary delay?" demanded Ammon.

"It is almost September," explained Elnora. "I sent for mother three days ago. We must wait until she comes, and we either have to send for Uncle Wesley and Aunt Margaret or go to them. I couldn't possibly be married properly without those dear people."

"We will send," decided Ammon. "The trip will be a treat for them. O'More, would you get off a message at once?"

Every one met the noon boat. They went in the motor because Ammon was too weak to walk so far. As soon as people could be distinguished at all Elnora and Philip sighted an erect figure, with a head like a snowdrift. When the gangplank fell the first person across it was a lean, red haired boy of eleven, carrying a violin in one hand and an enormous bouquet of yellow marigolds and purple asters in the other. He was beaming with broad smiles until he saw Ammon. Then his expression changed.

"Aw, say!" he exclaimed reproachfully. "I bet you Aunt Margaret is right. He is going to be your beau!"

Elnora stooped to kiss Billy as she caught her mother.

Mrs. Comstock shook out her skirts, straightened her hat and came forward to meet Philip, who took her into his arms and kissed her repeatedly. He passed her along to Freckles and the Angel, to whom her greetings were mingled with seedling and laughter over her wind blown hair. Then the O'More children came crowding to meet Elnora's mother.

"Before you think of something more give me your left hand, please," said Philip to Elnora.

Elnora gave it gaily and the ring slipped on her finger. Then they went together into the forest to tell each other all about it and talk it over.

"Have you seen Edith?" asked Ammon.

"No," answered Elnora, "but she must be here, or she may have seen me when we went to Petoskey a few days ago. Her people have a cottage over on the bluff, but the Angel never told me until today. I didn't want to make that trip, but the folks were so anxious to entertain me and it was only a few days until I intended to let you know myself where I was."

"And I was going to wait just that long, and if I didn't hear then I was getting ready to turn over the country. I can scarcely realize yet that Edith sent me that telegram."

"No wonder! It's a difficult thing to believe. I can't express how I feel for her."

"Let us never again speak of it," said Ammon. "It is done. We will forget it."

"I scarcely think I shall," said Elnora. "It is the sort of thing I like to remember. How suffering must have changed her! I would give a great deal to bring her peace."

"Henderson came to see me at the hospital a few days ago. He's gone a pretty wild pace, but if he had been held from youth by the love of a good woman he might have lived differently. There are things about him one cannot help admiring."

"I think he loves her," said Elnora softly.

Edith Carr went to her room after her goodby to Henderson, lay on her bed and tried to think why she was suffering as she was.

"It is all my selfishness, my unrestrained temper, my pride in my looks, my ambition to be first," she said.

"That is what has caused this trouble. No one really cares for me but Hart. I've sent him away, so there is no one—no one."

Edith pressed her fingers across her burning eyes and lay still.

"He is gone," she whispered at last. "He would go at once. He would not see me again. Oh, these dreadful days to come, alone! I can't bear it. Hart, Hart!" she cried aloud. "I want you! No one cares but you. No one understands but you. Oh, I want you!"

She sprang from her bed and felt her way to her desk.

"Get me some one at the Henderson cottage," she said to central and waited shivering.

After a time the sleepy voice of Mrs. Henderson answered.

"Has Hart gone?" panted Edith Carr.

"No! He came in late and began to talk about starting to California. He hasn't slept in weeks to amount to anything. I put him to bed. There is time enough to start to California when he awakens. Edith, what are you planning to do next with that boy of mine?"

"Will you tell him I want to see him before he goes?"

"Yes, but I won't wake him."

"I don't want you to. Just tell him in the morning."

"Very well."

Hart was not gone. Edith fell asleep. She arose at noon the next day, took a cold bath, ate her breakfast, dressed carefully, and leaving word that she had gone to the forest she walked slowly across the leaves. She was thinking hard and fast.

Henderson came swiftly down the path. A long sleep, food and Edith's message had done him good. He had dressed in new light flannels that were becoming. Edith met him.

"Let us walk in the forest," she said.

They passed the old Catholic graveyard and went back into the deepest wood of the island. There Edith seated herself on a mossy old log and Henderson studied her. He could detect a change. She was still pale and her eyes tired, but the dull, strained look was gone. He wanted to hope, but he did not dare.

"What have you thought of that you wanted yet, Edith?" he asked lightly as he stretched himself at her feet.

"You?"

Henderson lay tense and very still.

"Well, I am here."

"Thank heaven for that! I didn't want you to go away."

"Not at all!"

"Not at all; not ever; not unless you take me with you, Hart. I can't honestly say that I love you with the love you deserve. My heart is too sore. It's too soon to know. But I love you some way. You are necessary to me. You are my comfort, my shield. If you want me, as you know me to be, Hart, you can consider me yours."

Henderson kissed her hand passionately. "Don't, Edith," he begged.

"Don't say those things. I can't bear it. I understand. Everything will come right in time. Love like mine must bring a reward. You will love me some day. I can wait. I am the most patient fellow."

"But I must say it," cried Edith. "I—I think, Hart, that I have been on the wrong road to find happiness. I planned to finish life as I started it with Phil, and you see how glad he was to change. He wanted the other sort of girl far more than he ever wanted me. And you, Hart, honest, now—I'll know if you don't tell me the truth—would you rather have a wife as I planned to live with Phil or would you rather have her as Elnora Comstock intends to live with him?"

"Edith," cried the man, "Edith!"

"Of course, you can't say it in plain English," said the girl. "You are far too chivalrous for that. You needn't say anything. I am answered. If you could have your choice you wouldn't have a society wife, either. In your heart you'd like the smaller home of comfort, the furtherance of your ambitions, the palatable meals regularly served and little children around you. I am sick of all we have grown up to. Hart. When your hour of trouble comes there is no comfort for you. I am tired to death. You find out what you want to do and be, that is a man's work in the world, and I will plan our home with no thought save your comfort. I'll be the other kind of a girl as fast as I can learn. I can't correct all my faults in one day, but I'll change as rapidly as I can."

Henderson was not talking then, so they sat through a long silence. At last Henderson heard Edith draw a quick breath, and lifting his head he looked where she pointed. Up a fern stalk climbed a curious looking object. They watched breathlessly. By lavender feet hung a big, puffy, lavender spotted, yellow body. Yellow and lavender wings began to expand and take on color. Every instant great beauty became more apparent. It was one of those double brooded freaks, which do occur on rare occasions, or merely an Eccles Imperial moth that in the cool damp northern forest had failed to emerge in June. Edith Carr drew back with a long, shivering breath. Henderson caught her hands and gripped them firmly. Steadily she looked the thought of her heart into his eyes.

"By all the powers, you shall not!" swore the man. "You have done enough. I will smash that thing!"

"Oh, no, you won't!" cried the girl, clinging to his hands. "I am not big enough yet, Hart, but before I leave this forest I shall have grown to breadth and strength to carry that to her. She needs two of each kind. Phil only got her one. You may watch me deliver it!"

"Phil may be there by now."

"I hope he is. I should like him to see me do one decent thing by which to remember me."

"I tell you that is not necessary!"

"Not necessary?" cried the girl, her great eyes shining. "Not necessary? Then what on earth is the thing doing here? I just have boasted that I would change; that I would be like her; that I would grow bigger and broader. As the words are spoken, God gives me the opportunity to prove whether I am sincere. Help me, as you always have done!"

Henderson clutched his teeth and held her hand. The moth had emerged too recently to be troublesome. It climbed on her fingers quietly and obligingly clung there without moving. So hand in hand they went down the dark forest path. A strange excitement took possession of Edith. She began to feel proud of the creature.

"Do you know," she said to Henderson, "this is growing easier every step. Its clinging is not disagreeable, as I thought it would be. I feel as if I were saving it, protecting it. I am proud that we are taking it to be put into a collection or a book. It seems like doing a thing worth while."

"Edith, if you don't stop," said Henderson. "I will take you in my arms and kiss the face half off you, here on the avenue. You are adorable!"

"There's the place, and, thank goodness, there is a crowd," she said.

"Hello, every one!" she cried as she came on the wide veranda. "Only see what we found up in the forest. We thought you might like to have it for some of your collections."

She held out the moth as she walked straight to Elnora, who arose to meet her, crying, "How perfectly splendid! I don't even know how to begin to thank you."

Elnora took the moth. Edith shook hands with all of them and asked Philip if he were improving. She said a few polite words to the O'Mores, declined to remain on account of an engagement and went away gracefully.

"Well, bully for her!" said Mrs. Comstock. "She's a little thoroughbred after all!"

"That was a mighty big thing for her to be doing," said Freckles in a hushed voice.

"If you knew her as well as I do," said Philip Ammon, "you would have a better conception of what that cost."

"I have to take care of this," faltered Elnora, hurrying for the door to hide the tears which were rolling down her cheeks.

"I must help," said Ammon, disappearing also. "Elnora," he called, catching up with her, "take me where I can cry too. Wasn't she great?"

"Superb!" exclaimed Elnora. "I have no words. I feel so humbled!"

"So do I," said Ammon. "I think a great deal like that always makes one feel so. Now are you happy?"

"Unspeakingly happy!" answered Elnora.

Monday Club.

"Education Day" was observed by the Monday club on Monday afternoon, March 3, at the Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth. The president, Mrs. Arthur V. Harper, presided. Miss A. Lillian McGregor was in charge of the program for the afternoon.

Miss McGregor in her introductory remarks pointed out that the successful women's club of today measures its success not by the number of entertainments it provides for its members, but by the amount of service along educational, civic and philanthropic lines it renders the community in which it exists and through its membership in the State and General Federation of Women's clubs, the State and Nation.

It has meant much to our town that through the sixteen years since its organization, the Monday club has been bringing together, twice each month for seven months of each year, so many women from the various parts of the town, but it has meant more that the club has been doing so many other worth-while things.

Considering just the things done along educational lines and for our own schools, the Monday club has had each year one afternoon devoted to educational interests, has tried to entertain our public school teachers once a year and this year is giving complimentary membership to two senior class honor girls of the high school.

The club has given a picture to the high school and a piece of statuary for the hall of the same building, besides planting trees in the yard in front of the building. One year the club gave two money prizes, one to a girl and one to a boy for the best essays on Civil Service Reform, written by members of the senior and junior classes of the high school and as a preparation for the essays, had two lectures on the subject given before the pupils by Boston men.

For four years the club has maintained a scholarship for a mountain girl of the South at Maryville College, and with expenditure of thought, time and money, installed a system of penny savings in our grade schools and carried on the work for four years.

For three years the Monday club and the Old Colony club have been paying the salary of a sewing teacher for the girls of the eighth and ninth grades of our schools and by doing this, have enabled the town to provide manual training for the boys of the same grades.

At the close of her remarks, Miss McGregor presented Mrs. William C. Brown of Melrose, chairman of the Education committee of the Mass. State Federation, who spoke of the different lines of work being done by her committee, but spoke particularly on the moving pictures and the moving picture theatres.

A pleasing feature and one highly enjoyed during the afternoon was the chorus singing of thirty-five high school pupils under the leadership of Mr. Calderwood with Miss Mildred Newcomb as accompanist.

To Keep Ferns Fresh.

Use a soil of about half leaf mold or smooth earth and half fine sand. Give abundant drainage and then plenty of water. About once a month put them in the washtub or bathtub and give a thorough washing, not sparing soap; rinse well, and slightly loosen the soil before returning them to the stand. A bit of fresh beef buried in the soil occasionally helps.

Philosopher's Tip.

"I was riding in the park with the great Carlyle one morning when his wideawake blew off. A working man very civilly ran and picked it up. Instead of giving the man a pourboire, however meager, Carlyle took the returned hat with a bow, and said: 'Thank ye, my man; ye can just say ye've picked up the hat of Thomas Carlyle.'—'That Fourth Generation,' by Janet Ross.

Toll Uses in Sales Campaigns

SUCH testimonials as the following from the J. E. SOPER COMPANY, wholesalers of grain and feed at 206 Chamber of Commerce, Boston, furnish unimpeachable testimony of the value of the telephone, especially the toll lines, in sales campaigns.

We quote a paragraph of a letter to the Company from this concern:

"We find that the telephone takes the place, in a large degree, of men on the road, and that our business is done in a much more satisfactory way by having a man sell our goods from the office, as then he knows everything a salesman should know concerning the quality, location and other features of the goods, whereas a man on the road does not always have his information and is frequently induced to guess it, which does not work at all."

We would not suggest this rule in every case. The advantages of face-to-face salesmanship and the magnetism of a personality, coupled with the importance of showing many lines of goods, are not to be depreciated. On standard lines, however, once the salesman's personality is established, the telephone is an efficient auxiliary, and especially helpful to the salesman in making advance appointment.

TRAVELING MEN interested in little stories of the advantages of the telephone as a business auxiliary, are invited to send for "Modern Methods of Money Making." In Metropolitan Boston call the Contract Department, Fort Hill 7600. Elsewhere call the Local Manager.

Call From Brooklyn.

Rev. Emory L. Bradford, for the past three years secretary and general manager of the Clapp Memorial Association of East Weymouth, and previous to that time, the pastor of the East Weymouth Congregational church, has received a call to become minister in full charge of the Willow Place Chapel and Willow Place Settlement Work in Brooklyn, N. Y., at a very lucrative salary.

The religious and settlement work is carried on under the auspices of the church of Our Saviour, in Brooklyn, of which Rev. John Howland Lathrop is the minister. Some years ago, Albert M. White of Brooklyn built a model apartment house near Willow Place, and later made additions around an open square on the same model plans, so that at present, upwards of 2,000 persons are living there, and it is estimated that 30,000 persons, mostly mechanics, abide in the vicinity of the church, which is built directly across the street from the model tenement house.

Providing Mr. Bradford accepts the call, he will have charge of the church work in this section. His term at the Clapp Memorial expires on April first of this year and he is considering the advisability of accepting the call to Brooklyn.

Not To Cripple New England's Industries.

(From the Republican Standard, Bridgeport, Conn.)

The Hartford Times, which has stood by the New York and New Haven railroad system through all the ups and downs of the last year or so, sees that the business interests of New England rebel against the effort to cripple the industrial activities of the section and says: "There is a big reaction all over New England against the conspiracy to block the railroad development of these six states." There ought to be and when it has come home to the consciousness of the intelligent business men of New England that their best interests and those of the road are one, they will wonder that they have ever allowed themselves to be scared by spooks.

School Board Organize.

The school committee including the new member on the board, E. E. Leonard of East Weymouth, have all qualified and held their first meeting Tuesday evening.

An organization was perfected with the choice of Clarence P. Whittle as chairman and Miss A. Lillian McGregor, secretary.

Other business of the evening was the assignment of schools. The high school will be in charge of Mr. Whittle and Miss McGregor; Athens and Adams, Mr. Alden; Washington and Jefferson, Mr. Leonard; Hunt, Lincoln and Tufts, Mr. Whittle; Pratt, Shaw and Hollis, Theron L. Tirrell; and Bates, Howard and Pond, Prince Tirrell.

TWENTY-SIX YEARS AGO.

A movement is on foot to raise $1,000 by subscription, to be placed in the hands of an efficient committee, to enforce the liquor law in East Weymouth. One gentleman has already volunteered to give $100 and more if necessary.

The lighting of the streets at Weymouth Landing is a subject of interest and importance to every resident, and in order to perfect the improvement it is necessary that some person should be employed to attend to the lighting. To procure funds for this and other purposes of the society, the entertainment committee of the Weymouth Improvement Association have made arrangements for a dramatic entertainment, to be given in the lecture room of the Union church, Friday evening.

TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO.

Messrs. Editors:—The thanks of the entire community are due the Gazette for the light it has made to give the town a suitable library building.

John S. Fogg, Esq., expresses his entire sympathy with the movement for the division of Weymouth, and hopes that Wards 4 and 5 may be incorporated as a separate town.

The commotion with which the Boston papers have ventilated the division of the town lately is not at all surprising. The numerous busybodies have of course been at work, and the feeling intensified evening after evening among the local celebrities of the different wards.

Why not divide Weymouth into a dozen or more towns while we are about it? It will take surely that number of separate municipalities to accommodate those who want their new town to be composed of people of the same opinions as themselves. Not more than a dozen men can be found who agree upon any one place for a dividing line.

Weymouth has taken a step backward in refusing to build a public library building, that all true lovers of the good old town can but be sorry for. The argument was raised that we could not afford it. The truth is, and we fear it will be made too apparent in the near future, that the town cannot afford not to build it.

NOBODY SPARED.

Kidney Troubles Attack Weymouth Men and Women, Old and Young.

Kidney ills seize young and old. Often come with little warning. Children suffer in their early years—Can't control the kidney secretions. Girls are languid, nervous, suffer pain. Women worry, can't do daily work. Men have lame and aching backs. If you have any form of kidney ills You must reach the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys—

The following testimony proves their worth:—

Mrs. A. W. Raymond, 18 Chester street, Brockton, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my family with the best possible results. I do not hesitate to recommend them to anyone suffering from kidney complaint."

"When Your Back is Lame—Remember the name." Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Raymond had. 50 cents all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Union Church Social Club.

The monthly supper and entertainment of the Social Club of the Union Church of Weymouth and Braintree was held Wednesday evening, March 5th, at 6.30 o'clock. A bountiful supper was served by a committee of ladies under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles Jordan. About 80 members and guests of the club were served and a most enjoyable social hour followed. The ladies who assisted Mrs. Jordan and served the tables were Mrs. F. H. Morgan, Mrs. Louis Bates, Mrs. Ernest Barraud, Mrs. Robert Hamilton, Mrs. W. I. Jordan, Mrs. Wm. Aiken, Miss Annah Hayward, Miss Grace Ratcliffe, Mrs. D. B. Hayward, Mrs. H. F. South and Mrs. C. A. Rich.

A business meeting of the Club followed, during which the club presented the Church with membership in the Friendly Aid Society of Braintree. The president of the Club, Mrs. Albert E. Avery was elected one of the delegates to the Friendly Aid Society, and given power to appoint the other delegate. The Club expressed its sorrow at the illness of its treasurer, Mr. N. H. Goodspeed and sent its prayers and earnest hopes for his speedy recovery.

The company then adjourned to the main auditorium where Mr. Ernest M. Vaughn gave an illustrated lecture on California, presenting about 80 slides illustrating the marvellous growth, the wondrous beauty and charm of the golden state. A good audience enjoyed the lecture and all longed to see this wonderful land.

Wait Paint.

There are painters and waiters. Which am I going to do? Paint or wait? Which is better? How much am I worth with my property waiting? How much if I paint? Will my house be worth more or less if I paint?

Say it costs $2.00 a gallon Devco—I wouldn't paint any other—$3 or $4 more for putting it on. That's $50 or $60 a 10-gallon job.

The money is gone. Is it in the house? Is it all in the house?

Suppose I were selling; what should I get for that house fresh-painted and what should I get for it needing paint? I wonder why men paint before selling!

End of Golden Nugget Day.

Men have found a mass of native copper weighing 420 tons and they have discovered a chunk of pure silver weighing one and one-half tons, but the largest nugget of gold that has yet been seen weighed only 190 pounds. And gold seekers are informed that larger finds in the future are unlikely.

TOWN MEETING

Largest Warrant in Weymouth's History Takes But Six Hours to Pass Over

With one of the largest crowds that ever gathered in Weymouth to discuss town affairs, the annual town meeting was held in the Town Hall, East Weymouth, last Monday.

The day was ideal for all to get out, and when Town Clerk John A. Raymond called the gathering to order at 9:15 every seat on the floor and in the balcony was taken and a large number were standing at the rear of the hall and in the aisles.

After securing the attention of the several hundred people present Mr. Raymond began reading the record-breaking warrant. After reading the call Louis A. Cook moved to dispense with the detail reading of the warrant. The motion of Mr. Cook prevailed, Article 1 was taken up and for the twenty-fourth consecutive year, Judge Cook was elected to act as moderator of the annual town meeting of Weymouth. Mr. Cook was sworn in by Mr. Raymond.

Mr. Raymond relinquished the chair to Mr. Cook and the meeting was formally opened.

The moderator thanked the citizens for the honor of electing him moderator, and asked those who wished to speak on the several articles, to try to confine their remarks to the question of discussion and also to state their ideas as briefly and quickly as possible, as it would take some little time to go through the largest warrant in the town's history.

Article 2, to choose all necessary town officers, other than those elected by ballot was next taken up. M. E. Hawes moved that a committee, consisting of one from each ward be chosen to bring in a list of the officers later in the day. The committee appointed by the Moderator was as follows: M. E. Hawes, chairman; Burton S. Wright, John H. Takley, R. A. Whiting and J. H. Walsh.

This committee completed a list of names during the noon recess and presented the same to the meeting after the dinner hour, as follows:

PUBLIC WEIGHERS.

Ward 1. Arthur W. Bartlett, C. Lewis French, John J. Lane, John Byrnes, Michael A. Lane, Peter B. Nesbitt.

Ward 2. Sumner Thompson, Clara Mitchell, Charles T. Leavitt, Weston H. Cushing, T. H. Emerson, Loretta Looney, Wallace D. Cowing.

Article 3 to hear and act on reports of town officers and of any committees appointed at any previous meeting came up next and the various reports were accepted at once. Louis A. Cook gave a very clear report of the Old Home Week celebration last August and urged that the citizens keep in mind the 300th anniversary in ten years and to start early for a grand celebration of the great event. E. W. Hunt moved that a committee, consisting of A. P. Worthen, Louis A. Cook, George L. Barnes, Bradford Hawes and Fred C. Rivinius, be chosen to revise the town by-laws, and the motion was carried. On motion of Bradford Hawes, a committee was appointed to consider the proposition of a town-home. Russell H. Whiting, of Ward 1; M. E. Hawes, Ward 2; E. W. Hunt, Ward 3; Theron L. Tirrell, of Ward 4; and Frank E. Loud, Ward 5 were appointed to serve on this committee. Francis M. Drown reported for the special committee on auto fire apparatus and his report was accepted. Nothing was done this year about this matter however.

Article 4 was dispensed with after the recommendation of the appropriation committee that $170,000 be borrowed by the Treasurer with the approval of a majority of the selectmen, in anticipation of the collection of taxes of the present year, had been voted in the affirmative.

Article 5, to see if the town will designate the First National Bank of South Weymouth, the First National Bank of Boston and the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, as legal depositories for the funds of the town and the First National Safe Deposit Company of Boston, Mass., as a legal depository for the securities of the town. Voted so to do.

Article 6 was the first article in the warrant calling for money and in this article as well as in them all, the work of the appropriation committee was shown. This committee, through its efficient clerk Fred C. Rivinius, recommended that $67,000, one-half the dog tax and receipts from non-resident pupils be appropriated for support of the schools and the motion to do so was carried at once.

At this juncture William Holbrook, for the appropriation committee informed the voters present that, if all the recommendations of the committee were carried out the tax rate would be about $19.90 while if every amount was granted that was requested in the warrant the rate would be about $24.

After Mr. Holbrook had finished, $2000 was voted to be raised and appropriated to increase the salaries of the teachers in the elementary grades. The matter of the maximum pay for a teacher in these grades was left with the school committee.

At the conclusion of the reading by the Moderator, of Article 8, "to see what sum of money the town will vote to raise and appropriate for the repair of highways, townways and bridges and for the removal of snow," Peter Gallant secured the floor and spoke at length on the present conditions of the roads in town. Mr. Gallant criticized the action of the Selectmen in their selection of a town street superintendent and asked that a man be recommended by the meeting for the position. Charles H. Lovell and Michael Sheehy also spoke on this article. A motion to carry out Mr. Gallant's recommendation was made and carried 145 to 37. Mr. Gallant recommended to the Selectmen for the position, E. S. Wright of South Weymouth. At this time a recess of five minutes was declared until everyone was supplied with lists of the appropriation committee's doings.

Under Article 9, it was voted to raise and appropriate the sum of $2000 for street watering and oiling, the balance of the cost to be assessed on the abutters.

Article 10 raised and appropriated the sum of $12,000 for the Poor department.

In the 11th Article it was voted to raise and appropriate the sum of $3,000 for the relief of disabled soldiers and seamen and for the families of disabled soldiers and seamen, under Chapter 79 of the Revised Laws.

Article 12 raised and appropriated $5,300; ($5,000 of which comes back from State) for payment of State and Military Aid and burials under the provisions of Chapter 468 of the Acts of 1909.

Article 13 was as follows: On petition of Charles W. Bakst and others: To see if the town will accept the piece of Motor Fire Apparatus now installed in the Engine House in Ward Three. It was voted to accept the piece of apparatus with thanks.

Article 14 raised and appropriated $8000 for the Fire department the coming year and Article 50 "to see what sum the town will raise and appropriate for the suppression of forest fires" was included in this article.

Article 15 raised and appropriated the sum of $6,000 for the Police Department.

Article 16 was the cause of much argument by the voters of the town. This article read as follows: By request of the Committee on New Lock-Up in Ward Two: To see if the town will vote to raise and appropriate the sum of $5,500 to purchase land and erect a modern two story brick building suitable for a Police Station to be located near Jackson Square in Ward Two.

The appropriation committee recommended that a police station to cost in the neighborhood of $5500 be erected, $4,000 to be borrowed on Serial Notes. The appropriation committee also recommended that the special committee appointed at a recent meeting be named as the building committee for the desired building. Carmine Garafalo started the ball rolling, by requesting information on the kind of a structure the committee desired to erect, and the desired location. R. B. Worster, for the committee, stated that an option had been secured on the Lathrop estate adjoining Jackson square and further stated that architects' plans had been secured for a two story brick building, the lower floor to contain 10 steel cells and the second floor to be occupied by police headquarters and sleeping rooms. M. Sheehy arose and cited the conditions in Jackson square in the summer time, during the beach travel and spoke especially of the very poor sanitary conditions at these times. Charles R. Greeley requested more information in the desires of the committee in regard to needed land etc., and R. B. Worster replied that the option secured was on 60 ft frontage on Pleasant street and further said that he thought sanitary accommodations could be looked out for in the new building, along with the police station.

William H. Pratt next spoke on the matter. Warren T. Simpson raised the idea of putting a combination police station and fire station together. Mr. Worster stated that the committee had no authority to take up this matter as a body, but personally had thought the idea over. Mr. Simpson moved that the committee be advised to take up the idea also. Mr. Worster stated that he thought the idea improbable to be carried out, as permits were not likely to be given for a combination police and fire station, on account of insurance. At this point Mr. Garafalo asked if the new proposed structure was not to be the proof and Mr. Worster replied that as far as he knew it was.

Henry E. Hanley was recognized and spoke strongly against putting the new station in Jackson square. Mr. Hanley was very much against spending so much money on the matter and preferred a station away from Jackson square. He suggested and asked the consideration of the gathering on the idea of placing a police station of moderate worth on the triangular lot on the south side of the town hall on land owned by the town. Charles Guertin spoke on the matter and M. E. Hawes spoke on the conditions existing in Jackson square on Sundays in the summer and urged that something be done at once to remedy the poor sanitary conditions and other evils in the much traveled square. Alvin Hollis spoke and Warren T. Simpson said a few words more on the matter. Ernest A. Smith moved to reconsider the vote passed a few moments previous to recommit the idea to the committee for the report at the next annual meeting, and the motion was carried. William Shipp Jr. of North Weymouth electrified the audience with a neat speech on the ever present trait of "procrastination" in the American people and urged that the spirit of "putting off" be fought against and further urged that the people meet the issue today. Joseph A. Cushing spoke along the same lines. Mr. Garafalo secured the floor and stated that he was not against the idea of a new police station, but he was against such a costly structure at this time. He also preferred another location besides the one near Jackson square. Nelson Gardner and J. C. Howe spoke on the subject and John W. Cronin gave a few facts concerning the present need of a new up-to-date fire station. He asked the citizens to consider the auto traffic and street car travel and the inability of the police to cope with the situation without a police station, especially when a prisoner had to be taken to Ward 3 after he was arrested.

Wm. J. Holbrook spoke on the subject and J. W. Cronin asserted that he was in favor of putting the new station near Jackson square. A. H. Pratt gave several cases where the lock-ups were either in the square or on the main thoroughfare. Messrs. Butler, Sheehy and Strong all spoke and then a motion was carried to postpone further action on this article until 1 o'clock.

Article 17 was then taken up and $2,800, the income from the library funds and one half of the dog tax was voted for the use of the Tufts Library.

Article 18 raised and appropriated $500 for the maintenance of a public reading room at the Fog Library.

Article 19 raised and appropriated $2,000 for abatement and remittance of taxes.

HUNT SCHOOL CHAMPIONS

Ward 3 Grammar School Basket Ball Five Wins League Title

One of the fastest grammar school basket ball teams in this vicinity for the past three years, has been the five developed at the Hunt school Weymouth Landing. Under the direction of Mr. Berry, the school principal, the Ward 3 boys have always been close to the top in the Grammar school league and this past season finished on top, defeating the James Humphrey school quintet of East Weymouth two weeks ago, for the league title.

The team this year has been captained by George Langford, who plays right forward. This youngster is a crack shot and an able leader and has kept his teammates full of "pep" all the season. Langford's running mate, Wallace Whittle, who plays left forward is quite small in build, but what he lacks in weight, he amply makes up in fine shooting and passing.

Frank Roache, the pivot man on the team, has taken care of his opponents in fine shape. Leo Dwyer, the left back, has been a most consistent performer in every game and is blessed with a most accurate eye for the basket. Linwood Murphy, the right back has played a high class game in his position and has looked out for the high reputed scorers of the opponents side in fine style. Stanley Nadell the midget substitute has been eager and ready to get into the fray and on such occasions that he has been given a chance, he has shown his worth in every way. The Hunt school boys won 8 games and lost 1 in the grammar school league this season, the Humphrey school five being the only one to score a win over the Ward 3 lads. The boys were presented with a suitably inscribed cup for winning the league championship.

Article 20 raised and appropriated $3,700 for interest which may come due.

Article 21 raised and appropriated the sum of $1,500 for printing and advertising.

Article 22 raised and appropriated $3,000 for miscellaneous expenses.

Article 23 raised and appropriated $400 for Memorial day.

Article 24 raised and appropriated $800 for rent and care of town officers.

Under Article 25 the meeting voted to appropriate the income from the Town Hall for its care.

Article 26 raised and appropriated $50 for maintenance of Public Parks.

Article 27 raised and appropriated $1,000 on amendment by C. L. Merritt for the suppression of gypsy and brown tail moths. The vote to raise the appropriation from $2,000 to $4,000 was: yes, 143; no, 49.

Article 28 was to see what sum of money the town would vote to raise and appropriate for the payment of town officers. The committee recommended $8,000 to be divided as follows:—Selectmen and Overseers of the Poor, $2,400; assessors, $1,500; town clerk, $150; town treasurer, $150; auditors, $150; sealer of weights and measures, $200; tax collector, $1,150; tree warden, $100; registrars, $400; town accountant, $850 and general office clerk, $600. In connection with this article, a motion was made and carried that a committee of three, be appointed to take up the advisability of reducing and consolidating the boards of Selectmen, Overseers of the Poor and Assessors to one board of three members, the salaries of this trio to be $1,500 each per year, and the term of office to be three years, the board to give its entire time to town work. The committee is expected to report at the next annual town meeting. The vote in favor of this idea was yes, 113; no, 49.

Article 29 raised and appropriated the sum of $1,300 for election expenses.

Under Article 30, to see what sum of money the town will vote to raise and appropriate for the expenses of the Board of Health, Nelson Gardner moved that the money expended by the board be spent for home work and supplies. The motion to amend the article was carried.

As it was now twelve o'clock, the motion to adjourn until 1 o'clock was carried with a will, and dinner was in order, served in the lower hall under the auspices of the Woman's Relief Corps.

At one o'clock, after the appetites of the voters had been amply appeased, the moderator called the meeting to order and Article 16, in relation to the police station, was again taken up. The moderator read the article again and E. A. Smith opened up the afternoon's discussion, followed by Warren T. Simpson who favored a better location than the one suggested by Mr. Hanley earlier in the day. James Reed favored the lot near Jackson Square and Mr. Sheehy hoped amendment to article that the sum of $3,000 be used instead of $5,500, would not prevail. He was also against putting the station on the lot side of the town hall, as had been suggested several times previous. Preston Lewis spoke on the article, being in favor of purchasing of Daniel Reidy, a part of his land between the town hall and his house. Mr. Reidy stated he would sell a piece of land with a 35 foot front. W. H. Pratt presented the side of the committee in not suggesting the Reidy lot, saying that Mr. Reidy refused to sell when the committee waited on him recently. Mr. Hanley raised the point of the law that the sun must shine on three sides of the proposed building during the day, and thought this could not be procured on the Reidy lot. Mr. Hanley said he was in favor of better fire apparatus and let the police station be a cheaper affair this year. Mr. Shipp of North Weymouth objected that Mr. Hanley was not confining himself to the subject under discussion by talking on fire apparatus, but the objection was not sustained by the chair. Mr. Howe moved that the amount for erecting the building be $3,000, the previous amendment to this effect having been withdrawn, and the amendment was carried. At this point J. C. Howe with drew his amendment. Mr. Lewis spoke again in favor of Mr. Reidy's lot and also suggested the Franklin school lot. He also urged that something be done at once and asked that a ballot be taken to decide which lot the town wished, the one adjoining Jackson Square or Mr. Reidy's lot. Before the vote was taken, Mr. Reidy arose and stated that the reason he did not give the committee any encouragement when they called on him was due to the fact that he understood that they wanted the entire lot and he refused to sell all his extra land. He would sell the committee 35 ft. of his lot however for the same price. A vote was taken on Mr. Lewis' motion and the vote resulted in 181 in favor of Mr. Reidy's lot and 46 for the Jackson Square piece of land. Mr. Garafalo asked of the committee if the proposed piece of land on Mr. Reidy's estate was large enough and R. B. Worster gave the size of the building 26 feet, 1 inch, in front and 32 feet extension in rear. Preston Lewis moved that the article be amended to read as follows:—

By request of the committee on a new lotup in Ward 2, "To see if the town will vote and raise and appropriate the sum of $5,500 to purchase land and erect a modern two story brick building suitable for a police station, to be located on the Reidy lot in Ward 2." Nelson Gardner moved that the names of L. W. Cain, a mason, and George M. Kefne, the contractor, be added to the committee to have charge of the building, provided the meeting so desired to have the new station. J. C. Howe again moved that an amendment be made, his motion being to charge the amount for $5,500 to $3,000. Mr. Simpson was against the motion, however. He preferred $4,000 and moved that such an amount be named. Charles McMorro next spoke. He said he was in favor of $5,500 station for the police and believed in looking into the future and providing for that time now. John W. Cronin and Mr. Hanley spoke again and then a vote on the $5,500 proposition was taken and resulted as follows:—yes, 186; no, 122. As a two-thirds majority was needed on this article, the motion was lost.

Article 31 in regard to street lighting was taken up and F. C. Rivialis gave several facts for the benefit of the meeting and it was voted to have an electric light committee the following year instead of having the lights under the jurisdiction of the selectmen. The committee is as follows:—Russell B. Worster, Mathew O. Dowd, Walter W. Pratt, George A. Walker and Winslow M. Tirrell. It was voted also to carry out the recommendations of the appropriation committee on this article in regard to the street lighting and contracts for furnishing the lights which were as follows:—

Street lighting, $9,700, recommends Articles 68 to 90 inclusive be taken up with this article, and an electric light committee of five, also a contract for the town along the following lines:—

Town to appropriate $9,700 this year; $10,700 in 1914, $11,700 in 1915, $12,700 in 1916, $13,700 in 1917. The Weymouth Light & Power Company to reduce the price of lights as follows:—

In the year 1913 from $17.00 to $16.00
" 1914 to not over $15.75
" 1915 " " $15.50
" 1916 " " $15.25
" 1917 " " $15.00

The town to have the option to renew the contract at not more than the minimum price per light.

Article 32 raised and appropriated the sum of $30,500 for the water department.

Article 33 in regard to Sinking Fund and Water bonds, raised and appropriated $10,000.

Article 34 raised and appropriated $5,000 for construction in the water department, this sum to be taken from the water department income. The last part of this article is an amendment made by Nelson Gardner.

Article 35 in regard to hydrants, etc., raised and appropriated $1,000 for the use in this work.

Articles 36 and 37 were taken up together and the meeting voted to carry out the recommendation of the committee. These recommendations follow:—

That $1,000 be appropriated from the revenue of the water works, and such part of this sum, as may be necessary, be expended, under the direction of the Board of Selectmen, in the employment of an engineer to investigate our water system in regard to the conservation of our water supply; the advisability of installing meters; the proper method of overcoming the lack of water in the high places of the town; the extending, enlarging or replacing of mains with reference to our future growth; the possibility of a saving by having the water pumped by commercial electrical power and such other changes as the water system may need. That the report of this investigation be printed in the next annual town report. That the Board of Water Commissioners have such articles placed in the town warrant as will meet the recommendations made in said report. That the matter of installing meters and issuing bonds be postponed one year.

Article 38 relative to collector of taxes, voted that the rate be six mills on the dollar and the taxes to be payable October 10. The interest on overdue taxes was fixed at 6 per cent.

Article 39 raised and appropriated $500 for preservation of shade trees.

Article 40 raised and appropriated $2,500 to continue the survey and plotting of the town.

Under article 42, the sum of $12,589 13 was voted for over drafts and deficiencies.

Article 44, voted to give Selectmen authority to sell any real estate of which it may be possessed and for which it has no further use.

At this point M. E. Hawes moved that article 16 in regard to the police station be taken up and considered. Mr. Hawes spoke on the article and then moved that the town reconsider its previous vote on the article, and to raise and appropriate the desired sum of $5,500 for the lock-up on the Reidy lot. Mr. Cook asked Mr. Raymond to take the chair, and then spoke very much in favor of the new police station. A vote to reconsider was passed and then a ballot on the article, amended as previously stated, was taken. This time the two-thirds vote was not lacking and the article went through 267 to 48.

Articles 45 and 54 were taken up together and the meeting voted to raise by loan and appropriate the sum of $17,000 for the purpose of constructing and furnishing of additions to the Athens School building in Ward 1. It was voted to borrow $14,000 of the amount on serial notes and that the school committee be chosen as building committee. Nelson Gardner moved that two practical builders be added to the building committee. Prince Tirrell spoke on this matter and William Schipp moved an amendment that the school committee be allowed to elect two builders to work with them, and Mr. Gardner accepted the amendment and the motion prevailed.

Article 46 in regards to a higher pay per hour for firemen, was finally carried after some discussion and the new rate will be 50 cents per hour instead of 30 cents.

Articles 47 and 53 were next taken up together and the appropriation committee recommended as follows:

Article 58, for a fire alarm box on Forest street, South Weymouth, brought up some little discussion. The motion to install a box at the desired spot was carried.

Article 60, relative to curbstones and sidewalks a Lovell's Corner, voted to raise and appropriate $100 for further work.

Greenwich Observatory.

In the year 1675 King Charles II. of England founded the royal observatory at Greenwich in order that astronomical observations might be made for the assistance of sailors. The history of the observatory has been the history of chronology and of this practical side of astronomy. Its work and its standards have become distinctly international. The meridian of Greenwich now determines the longitude of the world.

QUINCY AVENUE,

East Braintree.

P.O. Address, Weymouth.

Following Are a Few of the Items Which Appeared in the Gazette Years Ago This Week.

The bill introduced into the Legislature last week, for annexation of a portion of Braintree to Weymouth, was defeated, the principal objection to it being that advanced by Mr. Willis, Representative from Braintree, that it was a land speculation.

Mrs. Hannah Totman, widow of the late Ebenezer Totman, and mother of Joseph Totman, Esq., died at her son's residence on High street, last Wednesday morning, about 3 o'clock, at the age of 93 years, 6 months and 5 days, she being the oldest person in Weymouth at the time of her death.

The Third Universalist society of Weymouth held their annual parish meeting Tuesday evening of the present week. Alben Whiting was chosen moderator, and the officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows:—secretary, Augustus Beal; treasurer, E. S. Bais; assessors, J. W. Bartlett, C. T. Robbins, E. F. Pratt; auditor, E. F. Pratt.

This whole community has been saddened by the death of Deacon Jarius Sprague, aged 72 years. For 37 years he had been a prominent citizen of this place. The extensive Iron Works building was erected by him, and also the Congregational church is a monument of his labor and skill. When the Congregational church was organized he was chosen Deacon and this office he has held with greatest acceptance for 18 years.

THE LUMBER LADEN SCHOONER with 100,000 feet of spruce for J. B. Rhines, which has been lying at Quincy bridge all winter came up to the wharf last Monday.

The latest scheme on foot in South Weymouth, and one which we think would work to the advantage of many, is the organization of a co-operative bank, which would provide a way for men of moderate means to build homes and pay for them on the installment plan.

Quincy Advertiser:—"Weymouth elected forty-two constables. Oh, what a wicked place it must be!" Are we to infer that Weymouth people are wicked because they elected forty-two cops, or that the forty-two are wicked.

The ninety-second birthday anniversary of Mrs. Sarah Jacobs Pool, formerly of South Weymouth, and who now resides with the family of her nephew, John Lewis, at Hingham Center, was observed yesterday by her relatives and friends.

Edmund S. Hunt of "Hunt's Life-Saving Gun Co." was in Washington last Monday at the request of the Gov't Life-Saving Service, and Supt. Kimball, Capt. Lyle of the Army, and Lieut. Dunn of the Navy, with others, were present to witness the trials of the Hunt gun, which were a great success.

Torrey's factory is to be started up—Good. Let us hope for more news of the same sort from all over town.

Smelts have appeared in the brook in large numbers, and notwithstanding the law, many smelts are taken from the brook day and night. This is an unusually early day for smelts to arrive.

The members of the Lovell's Corner Hose Co. are pleased at the action of the Town meeting last Monday in appropriating $850 for a hose carriage for the company.

The members of the Commonwealth club, are very anxious to know whether April 19 is to be made a holiday instead of Fast day, as they wish to hold a dance the night before in Clapp's hall.

The annual meeting of the Norfolk Cycle club was held at the club rooms last Monday evening, at which time the new constitution and by-laws were adopted with some slight changes. The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, Edward B. Nevins; vice president, Bates Torrey; secretary, Samuel A. Vinig; treasurer, Charles T. Foster; captain, Charles H. Tinkham; 1st lieutenant, Charles H. Clapp; 2d lieutenant, William Greenwood.

Not Paint.

With linseed oil at $1, what sort of oil do you think they use in "paint" at $1.75 and $1.50?

That stuff is counterfeited paint. You can cheat yourself; you can't cheat Time and Weather.

Paint is a rubbery coat over wood and iron to keep-out water.

Counterfeit paint may look like it; counterfeit money looks like money.

DENVER'S MASSIVE MINT.

It Would Take a Burglar Fifty Years to Break Into It.

If a man twenty-five years old started to rob the Denver mint he would be seventy-five before he finished his task of tunneling and drilling, if he ever reached the vault. When he did reach the massive cage he could never get at the money without detection.

He would have to bring his diving suit along, as there is water several feet deep under the foundation of the mint. He would first have to go through a wall four and a half feet thick of brick and portland cement. The boilers and coal bins are far underground. They are on the Evans street side and more strongly protected than a man-of-war. They are at least twenty feet below the surface and surrounded on the top, side and floor with a concrete wall four feet thick.

Supposing our young boring friend got through that wall, when he emerged he would find another just as thick and just as strong. The lower portions of the mint building are divided into compartments. They are separated, each compartment with its own defense.

The thief or thieves would find a real problem to get into the storage vault. He would first have to break through a steel door weighing seven tons. He would then face what is known as the outer vault. The safe in this is 60 by 20 feet and is ten feet high. There are millions of dollars in it.

This safe is girt on every side with a lining of chrome steel. In the corridor within the great vault there are four doors leading into the subvaults. The cells where are located these vaults are barred and netted with steel. There are no less than sixty doors in the storage vault. Each of the eleven minor storage vaults is in a steel girt cage, which has two massive steel gates. One is above, the other below.

The Diebold safe is secured by time locks. On the inner side of an eight inch thick door is a clock, which can be set at night to be opened at any selected time. Until that time arrives not even government employees can get in the ponderous door. Two officials with keys must aid when the clock is ready to let them in.

The guards will visit the storage vaults every few minutes and turn on a flood of lights. Inspectors go about day and night and visit all of the treasure rooms of the building, upstairs and down. Special attention is given to the vaults, but no portion of the building is neglected. Every thirty minutes "All's well!" is heard over the private telephone.

All over the building are hidden high power magazine rifles. They are oiled and inspected regularly. It is said that there are at least a hundred of these guns always ready for use. Three years ago $5,000 was spent in the construction of massive gates leading to the rooms where the money and bullion are stored.

The alarm system is connected with police headquarters. It is said that the Denver mint is the best protected in the world, and no big building has anything better in the way of defense, with the exception perhaps of the National City bank of New York. This bank has an elaborate system of steam pipes around its vaults for use against raids. If these valves were released it would roast every one in the basement of the bank alive.—Denver Post.

A Projectile's Gain of Speed.

Experiments with improved instruments for measuring the velocity of projectiles have shown that the speed goes on increasing after the missile has left the mouth of the cannon. Leaving the muzzle with a velocity of 1,471 feet a second, a projectile has been observed to increase its speed to 1,689 feet a second within the first six feet. It is only after having traveled twenty-five yards that the projectile's velocity becomes reduced to the speed it had on leaving the muzzle. This is ascribed to the impulse of the expanding gas being felt for some distance beyond the cannon's mouth.—New York Tribune.

Moisten the Buttonhole.

Every man knows the difficulty and agony of a refractory collar stud. With a breakfast to eat, a train to catch and an appointment to keep, few things are more maddening than the collar which simply will not ally itself to the stud. But few things are so easy to remedy. All that is necessary is to dip the thumb and forefinger in water and slightly moisten the obstinate buttonhole. Then the stud slips in without a murmur.

Model Short Story.

Encliff lays down his plot, sets in stantly to work at its development, letting no incident creep in that does not bear relation to the climax, using no unnecessary word, always keeping his one end in view, and the moment he reaches the culmination he stops.—Robert Barr.

Sure.

Binks was gazing into the showense in front of the dental establishment when Jinks espied him.

"Hello," said Jinks. "What are you doing here?"

"Oh, just picking my teeth," replied Binks.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Reassuring Her.

"Do you really love me?" she wrote. "Referring to my last letter," he promptly replied, "you will find that I love you devotedly on page 1, madly on page 3 and passionately on pages 4 and 5."—Pittsburgh Post.

A creative economy is the fuel of magnificence.—Emerson.

WEYMOUTH TOWN CLERKS.

William Perkins was appointed clerk of the writs for the town of Weymouth in 1643 and held the position until 1645 when he was succeeded by William Torrey, who served until 1654.

The first mention, however, of any officer with the title of town clerk, is in 1654 when William Chard, the only school master in Weymouth, was elected to fill that position and continued in it until 1690, a period of 36 years, the continued occupant of the position.

We are, however, nearing the time when a record will top over that of Mr. Chard. On Monday last the present incumbent, John A. Raymond, entered his 35th year and has seen the coming and going of many boards, of town officers, as well as warrants in which much was involved but none of the length of that of 1913, the result of which will be found quite complete elsewhere in this issue.

Tufts's Library for 1913.

The Board of Trustees of the Tufts Library met at the Library building yesterday afternoon, organized and did other business for the year.

Dr. Clarence P. Whittle was elected chairman; Francis M. Drown, secretary and treasurer; Bradford Hawes, J. Ellis Gardner and W. F. Hathaway, auditors; Benj. B. Holland, James H. Flint and L. A. Cook, book committee; J. B. Holland, W. F. Hathaway and E. W. Hunt, supply committee.

Miss Abbie F. Loud was appointed Librarian; Miss Alice B. Blanchard and Miss Louise C. Richards assistants.

Not Knocking.

"Beg pardon," said the agent, as Mr. Grouch opened the door, "but I would like to ask if Mr. Dodger, your next door neighbor, is good pay." "How do I know whether he is good pay or not?" exclaimed Mr. Grouch. "All I know about him is that he has four grandchildren and he still owes for his marriage license."

BOWLING NOTES.

"All aboard" for the last six weeks of the schedules.

The race for the championship at the Norfolk club is very keen and all the teams are determined to finish strong during the next few weeks of the season.

That was some match on the Norfolk club alleys last Thursday night between Wallace Lyons' team and Frank Lond's pin chasers. These two star aggregations split the points, and the total went to team 4 by one pin, the scores being 1255 to 1254.

B. J. Elkington's "Live Wires" have signed up a classy man in Blackwell. This roller is an old time bowling artist and is a sure enough "come back" according to his work the past two weeks.

On the alleys of the Norfolk club in South Weymouth last Thursday evening, the most exciting match of the winter was rolled between team 3, Frank Lond, Kenneth Brennan, Elliott Veazie, William MacCauley and Frank Barnes and team 4, Wallace Lyons, Calvin Veazie, Stephen Pratt, Ralph Gridley and Ralph Thomas. The two quintets each took two points. Team 4 got two strings, each by a narrow margin, while team 3 got one string and total by the score of 1255 to 1254.

Arthur Cunningham, the star bowler of team 2 of the C. M. A. league, has recovered from his recent slump all right. He split the maples last Friday afternoon for 120 and followed this up with four or five more strings, all over 100. Some bowling.

The Weymouths increased their lead in the Old Colony Bowling league. Wednesday evening, by defeating the City Squares of Quincy, all for points. The score:

Weymouth.
Connell	101	115	92
Shaw	98	94	104

Burrell	105	103	85
Kiley	103	106	93

City Squares.

Hanson	90	90	91
Wentworth	79	95	81
Sperkle	87	95	95
419-430-428-1277

Monday night on the C. M. A. alleys Lou Loring's "Fireworks" blew up with a loud report, when they lost four points to B. J. Elkington's five. Team 3 took all three strings and total from team 1, with a grand total of 1257 to 1118. Ben Elkington was high man of the evening with a single of 106 and a three string total of 263.

On Tuesday night Arthur Cunningham's "Pats" applied the kalsomine to Karl Tirrell's "Silent Five" taking all three strings and total 1238 to 1191. Norton F. Pratt and Arthur Cunningham were tied for high single string of the evening with 93, while Cunningham got the high three string total with 263 pins.

At the Norfolk club on Wednesday evening team 6, Randolph Lamphrey, F. Howe, M. Abbott, William Nash and A. Shaw took three points from team 4, Wallace Lyons, Calvin Veazie, Stephen Pratt, K. Gridley and Ralph Thomas, with a pinfall of 1287 to 1228 for team 4. R. Lamphrey rolled the highest three string total with 277 pins, while S. Pratt rolled a high single of 101.

P. T. Pearson's "City Team" had an off night Wednesday evening at the C. M. A. alleys and lost two strings and total to Dr. F. L. Doucette's "Patients". The winning five got a total of 1141 while the losers got 1120. Stillman got the high single with 95 and Rev. E. J. Yaeger rolled 248 for high three string total.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Mr. Hilton was recently elected a member of the Old Colony Club of High School Principals, formed in Whitman a few weeks ago.

Forty members of the senior class attended the annual town meeting last Monday and were highly interested in the articles of the warrant.

The Freshmen class is to be given a complimentary social party by the seniors in a few weeks. The committee of the seniors who has charge of the arrangements is: Carleton Murphy, Urban Nolan, Richard Lyon, Bowdoin Smith, Miss Frances Denlinger, Miss Martha Tirrell and Miss Alice O'Connor.

The two history divisions of the senior class have subscribed for "Current Events" for the remainder of the year.

The honor list for the past two months contains the following names: seniors; Alice Bentley, Edith C. Bicknell, Richard Lyons, Fred Philbrick and Martha Tirrell; juniors; Helen Hunt and Margaret Reddy; freshmen; Ruth Ford, Dorothy Holman, Mary Healy, Agnes Lyons and Arthur White.

Lovells Corner Improvement Society.

The Lovells Corner Improvement Society held its monthly business meeting at Pratt's Hall Tuesday evening. A debate "Resolved that Capital Punishment should be abolished. Mr. F. Blanchard, Mr. Beals, Mr. Reynolds, Mrs. Lane, Mr. Ken, Miss Holbrook and Mr. Sampson affirmative and Mr. Inkle negative. In spite of the large number on the opposing side Mr. Inkle stood his ground well.

A collation was served by W. W. Pratt "Caterer". The association voted an appropriation for more shade trees to be set out in the spring.

A PLEASURE

Where a gift a pleasure gives
 There comes a counter action,
 The giver has a double joy
 And lots of satisfaction.

Where the sun shines on the path
 Which we are daily treading,
 There comes a joy bright as the rays
 The old sun may be spreading.

When we behold from day to day
 The pleasure that is given
 To those who praise the quality
 Of goods, for which we've striven.

There comes to us a pleasure to
 Which is not so amazing;
 Our Graham Crullers and Eclair's
 Our trade are always praising.

Can We Help You?
(As We Helped This Man)

Herbert O. Russell is a farmer in North Hadley, Mass., who turned a threatened loss, not only to himself but to his neighbors, into a highly profitable business transaction by making judicious use of the telephone toll lines. He is the Mr. Blank of the following story which appeared in TELEPHONE TOPICS. We use his name by permission:

A HADLEY PASTORAL.

The fertile lands of old Hadley are especially adapted for raising tobacco and onions and especially onions, which are usually a very profitable crop. This year the crop was larger than ever before—bumper to the nth. Prices at once shrunk alarmingly until it came to be a grave question whether it was worth while to market the crop. Some farmers became discouraged and left the crop to rot in the fields. One gave the subject careful thought. While he was pondering the question his glance fell upon the telephone in his kitchen. Could that be the answer?

The next day he called on Manager Proctor for information. He secured full particulars about our toll facilities, then went home and planned a sales campaign by telephone. Each evening the family carefully studied the directories and made up a list of wholesale commission dealers in the large cities.

Early each morning Mr. Blank called them by telephone. Results were immediate and surprising. He made satisfactory terms in short order for the sale of his entire crop and before long he was shipping onions by the carload. After he disposed of his own crop, the commission merchants continued their demands for more onions, and Mr. Blank commenced buying his neighbors' crops which he sold at a good profit. As a result of his work he has sold twenty one carloads of onions. It need not be added that he is extremely grateful for the resources of our telephone service.

Are you, Mr. Farmer or Business Man, confronted with a distribution problem of any kind? Let us help you if we can. Call your Local Manager and see what he can suggest. In Greater Boston telephone (free of charge) to Fort Hill 7600, the Contract Department.

The Pigeonhole Tombs in Use in the Cemeteries of Spain.

A rather curious and to our ideas somewhat unpleasant custom obtains in Spanish cemeteries. All around the burying ground a building is erected whose design can only be compared to that of a nest of pigeonholes, often seen in postoffices and similar institutions. Each pigeonhole is a tomb.

When a person dies his relatives hire a pigeonhole for five years, and the remains are placed inside. The end is then sealed up with mortar and a memorial tablet affixed on the outside. The lease of the pigeonhole may be renewed at the end of the five years, but if it is allowed to expire the tomb is unsealed and the bones removed to make way for another tenant.

Needless to say, the plan has some good points. The space taken up by the "pigeonhole cemetery" is comparatively small, as is also the cost of burial. Pictorialness is, however, conspicuously absent, nor is sentimental grief catered for, as it would be impossible to go and mourn at the grave of a person buried in a pigeonhole so high up that a ladder was needed to reach it.

To such as prefer the old fashioned graves the central space of ground is offered, but the pigeonholes are the most popular.—Wide World Magazine.

Two Knaves
Of Hearts

And the Result of Their Meeting

By ARNOLD HORTON

The soldier boy of 1861-65 was a very different personage from the white haired, wrinkled, tottering old man of the present day. Bob Meriden entered the Union army at eighteen and came out at twenty-two. When he was mustered into the service he was a rosy checked boy with a perpetual smile on his face. To look at him no one would have thought that he was going south to stand up to be shot at. Yet the only time when he looked serious was at being ordered north on recruiting service. He was afraid he would miss a fight.

But this was in the beginning of it. The enthusiastic young men of that period got quite enough of fighting before they were through with campaigning, and those who struggled with disease and wounds had a harder time still. But this story is of the earlier, reckless, devil may care period when the youngsters who went into the war felt that they were off on a picnic.

Bob Meriden was as full of the romance of war as any soldier in the northern army. He had read stories of spies and their doings and was especially ambitious to do secret service work. So he told his captain that if there was any call from headquarters for volunteers to go south for information to let him know. One day Bob was notified that such service was required, and if he cared to undertake it he was to report in person at headquarters. He lost no time in doing so, and the general after looking him over said to him:

"Can you talk like a southerner?"

"Reckon," was Bob's reply.

"Let me hear you say New York."

"Nieu Yauk."

"I expect you'll get on in that respect. Have you ever done any secret service work?"

"No, general."

The general was silent for a few moments. He realized the dangers the boy was about to meet and hesitated to send him. He told Bob that he ran a considerable risk of being hanged and advised him not to undertake the job. But the young soldier begged to be permitted to go, and the general finally consented. Bob was to proceed south to the Confederate lines, note the positions and numbers of the troops and secure such other information as would be valuable to his commander.

That evening after dark the spy, dressed in a suit of "butternut" and a faded straw hat, presented a pass at the picket line for Abner Shock. He was permitted to go forth and after walking a few miles, in order that he might not be found near the Federal lines, went into bivouac in a wood.

In the morning he was awakened by the sun shining through the trees and, sitting up, looked about him. The birds were chirping in the trees, the air was balmy. Indeed, the scene was as peaceful as any the young man had ever experienced. It was difficult for him to realize that he was between two armies, whose business it was to slaughter each other, and that if he were known to be a Union soldier in disguise he would be swinging off from the limb of a tree.

Arising from his earthly bed, he made his way to the turnpike and walked southward. Coming to a farmhouse, he asked for a breakfast and received some corn pone and a cup of chicory in lieu of coffee. Being asked where he came from and where he was going, he said that the Yanks had destroyed his father's farm and he was going down to enlist in the Confederate army.

After breakfast, for which he paid in Yankee shipplasters of the period, he took to the road again. He had not gone far before he met a slip of a girl walking in the opposite direction. She was a country girl of the better class and quite pretty. Bob, who had seen nothing but men since he came to Virginia, was not minded to let this young creature go by without a word with her. She was carrying a basket on her arm containing eggs and butter, and Bob, by way of opening conversation, asked her if they were for sale. She replied that they were not, but he was at liberty to help himself. He had no use for either at present and declined. Then they sat down beside the road and began to chatter like magpies.

The girl, much to Bob's surprise, told him that she belonged to a Union family; that they were all being treated very badly and that she would like to go north to Harrisburg, where an aunt of hers was living. But she feared she would not be permitted to pass through the Union lines and wouldn't know how to travel if she were. Bob asked her where she lived, and she said her home lay within the Confederate lines not far below. She was taking the butter and eggs she carried to a house she pointed out. What she would do next she didn't succeed in making clear to Bob.

The upshot of the dialogue was that Bob changed his mind about enlisting in the Confederate army and told the girl that he would be back that way in a day or two and he thought he might help her on her way to her aunt in Harrisburg. To this she replied that he might find her on her return and he might not.

Leaving her, Bob pursued his way down the road, thinking more of her than his mission. Just before coming to a depression in the road that would hide her from him he turned for a last look. She turned at the same moment, and they both smiled. Then Bob, seeing a cluster of white tents before him, began to remember what he was there for.

The next evening about dusk Ella Carmel, the girl Bob had met on his way south, looking out through a window, saw half a dozen Confederate troopers riding rapidly up the road. One of them left the others and, coming to the house, called. Ella opened the window, and he asked if she had seen anything of a young fellow in a butternut suit. She said she hadn't, and, riding on, he joined his comrades.

Some twenty minutes later, when it was quite dark without, she saw a face at the window. It was very pale and wore a frightened look. Moreover, it was the face of the young man in butternut she had met on the road the morning before.

Bob Meriden had got within the Confederate lines through a gap in the pickets, had gone about gathering information, but had excited suspicion. He had become aware of his danger and hid himself in a wood from whence he had seen the men who had suspected him riding rapidly on the road and felt sure they were after him. Finding a picket dozing on his post, Bob effected an exit and, skulking over wooded ground, had brought up at the house in question.

The two youngsters held a conference, and Bob told Ella that the Confederates had tried to force him to enlist in their cause, but he had succeeded in getting away from them. He did not dare remain in the house—he would skulk in the woods—but if the next morning she would meet him on the road within range of the Federal pickets he would see what he could do toward getting her through the lines and sending her north to her aunt. She thankfully accepted his proposition, and Bob skulked away to hide from those seeking him.

It was about 10 o'clock in the morning that Bob, having passed through a cornfield, mounted a fence at a rise in the ground and looked about him. On the road he saw walking a figure that he judged to be Ella Carmel. Descending from his point of observation he made toward her, and she waved her hand to him. He soon joined her and they walked together toward the Union picket line.

Bob knew that at that time his commander, who was preparing for a move, was very particular about allowing citizens in his camps. So, concluding that it would be necessary, in order to get his protegee through and send her on her way north, that he should vouch for her, he told her that he would tell the general that he had found in her a cousin and instructed her as to the part she should play. She was very grateful to him for this though she regretted that the deception should be necessary. On coming to the picket line Bob asked the officer in command to inform the general of his coming and ask permission to bring another person to headquarters. The officer was directed to bring the two in at once.

Bob had gathered just the information his commander required. Ella remained outside the tent while Bob went in and reported. As soon as he had done so he informed the general of his meeting with his cousin and asked permission to send her north. The general was surprised at the coincidence and looked incredulous. But Bob assured him that the girl was an unsophisticated little thing, barely sixteen, and the commander gave his consent. He suggested, however, that one of his staff take the girl in charge.

Bob winced at this, but was forced to obey, and bade goodby to his little cousin with regret, promising that as soon as the war was over he would look her up.

That was the last that Bob saw of Ella Carmel till the next day, when he received an order to report in person at general headquarters. What was his astonishment to find his cousin there with a soldier on each side of her. "In you two," said the general, "are a pair of knaves. You go south to do secret service work for me and bring back a 'cousin' to do secret service work for the enemy."

"What do you mean, general?" cried the astonished Bob.

"I suspected your 'cousin,' whose story was very flimsy, and gave her the run of our camps. But I set a watch upon her. She was taking down notes of our forces and making sketches of our defenses when she was interrupted in her work and brought to me."

"You don't mean it, general!" exclaimed Bob.

"According to the rules of war, it is my duty to order a drumhead court martial and hang her."

"Great heavens!"

"There was an impressive silence, which was broken by the general. 'The information you brought me is very valuable. What reward do you ask for getting it?'

Bob took the hint and said eagerly, 'I ask a pardon for this little girl.'

"That let's me out," replied the general. "It is my duty to hang her, but since you claim her life as your reward for a service in which you risked the death that is due her she is pardoned. When the information she has acquired shall have become useless she shall be permitted to go where she likes."

After the war Captain Robert Meriden looked up his "cousin," though he did not go to Harrisburg to find her. He married her in Virginia, and they were for years known as the two spies.

No. 74.Worlds Within Worlds.

[Written for the Gazette and Transcript.]

"Did you ever think," asked the Bride, meditatively, "how many worlds there are?"

The Benedict put a fresh log on the fire as he answered.

"Give it up, Beloved. I studied astronomy once, but it was long ago and I have forgotten."

"I don't mean astronomical worlds; I mean, why, conditions of life, perhaps I ought to say."

"Oh! I see. You mean rich, and poor and middlers," volunteered the Benedict. "That doesn't begin to cover them," the Bride corrected him. "For among the rich there are worlds many, as there are, too, among the poor and the middlers."

"For instance, there are idle rich and busy rich; sportive rich and studious rich; traveling rich and stay-at-home rich. To say a man is rich or poor doesn't classify him. It is how he spends his time that determines what world he is in."

"Oh, yes," acknowledged the Benedict, "like the business world, the college world, the sporting world, et cetera."

"That comes nearer to it, but even that is too comprehensive. I really suppose that in the last analysis each individual lives in a separate world."

"There is the world of one's own personality wherein one must be wholly alone. That, they say, is why 'everybody's lonesome' at times."

"Then there's the world of one's own home circle," cut in the Benedict, "and 'and when I leave home every morning I step into a world of hustle and bustle known as the business world. When I go to the primary, I step into a political world; on Sunday I venture into the church world; when you absolutely insist, I make a sally into the social world. It's a very complicated world when once you get started tracing out the pattern."

"Yes," agreed the Bride, "it reminds me of the intersecting circle designs we used to make at school with our inkwell covers. We used to color each circle with a different crayon, just to see what color it would make on the overlapping section."

"That wouldn't be a bad idea to carry out in our intersecting worlds," suggested the Benedict. "We could decide on some color for our own personal world and try the result of crossing it with the rose-color of the home world, the gold of the business world, the—what color shall we call the political world?"

"Muddy Brown," replied the Bride promptly.

"Oh, well, let it go at that; and the clear blue of the church world, and the pale pink of the social world. It would make a big difference what color you chose for yourself, wouldn't it?"

"Quite a bit," nodded the Bride. "Egotistical people should choose black because no matter which world they go into they blot out all the native color with their own. I can think of people who might fittingly choose white, because they can so easily lose their personality in any world they happen to be in at the moment."

"Some of us are so green," said the Benedict, "that we make a mess of almost any world."

"Yes," laughed the Bride, to say nothing of those who are so blue that they make an impression. I see you have caught the idea."

A LOOK OF TERROR.

How Artist Hodder Posed His Model to Secure It.

Ferdinand Hodder's picture "Das Mutzige Weib" (the courageous woman) has been much discussed in art circles, especially in Switzerland, the home of the artist.

The look of terror on the woman's face is lifelike. The story of how the artist got the facial effects, depicting fright and determination, is as follows:

Four models came to his studio to sit for the picture. He asked them in turn to wear an expression such as they would have on jumping into a lifeboat from a sinking ship in a storm. Not satisfied with the results, he took them up to the flat leaded roof of his house, which is five stories high, and placed a chair on the extreme edge. The poor models were dreadfully frightened, and each in turn sat wide-eyed on the forward edge of the chair, too nervous to look in any direction but straight forward.

The artist chose one of the women and took up his easel and rapidly sketched in the face and upper part of the figure, though not at all rapidly for the sitter.—Munich Cor. New York Sun.

Sleep and Play.

If we want to sleep every night we should work and play every day. But the play must be play in its essence—that is, we must enjoy it. This is the gist of Dr. C. W. Saleeby's hints on exercise for business men. Nature is not so diabolically contrived, he says, that anything we enjoy is bad for us. "We daily need work to discipline us, maintain our physical, mental and moral alertness; we daily need play to hearten us (it may be cricket, music, chess, geology or even golf; we are all as different as our faces and have different needs accordingly), and we nightly need sleep to restore us." Dr. Saleeby himself takes no annual holiday, he believing that the best plan is "a holiday every day."—New York Telegram.

BLUE LAWS OF OLD

Codes That Terrorized New England in Colonial Days.

ENACTED BY THE PURITANS.

Witchcraft Was an Offense Punishable With Death, and It Was a Crime For Husband and Wife or Mother and Child to Kiss on the Sabbath Day.

Blue laws were no joke, though often an object of irony and derision. They were drawn up by Puritan pioneers—a race of stern and inflexible men who in the excess of their religious zeal and enthusiasm adopted such sanctimonious names as Stand Fast-on-High Stringer, Kill-Sh Smith, More Fruit Fowler, Fight-the-Good-Fight Fowler.

It may be well to say here that each of these names cited was actually given to and borne by a man, and names of the same sort are to be found in the records of New England, says Illuminatus in his "Blue Laws of Connecticut."

These men went straight to the old Mosaic law of Holy Writ for their code. In fact, each section of the capital laws has its Bible text appended—a gruesome combination of sermon and death warrant.

The original blue laws were those written of New Haven, Connecticut colony, at the first more or less unwritten, or at least unprinted, but systematized and printed by Governor Eaton in 1656. They were enveloped in blue colored paper, whence the popular and subsequently unpopular name.

The Plymouth and Massachusetts colonies also had their blue laws, calculated to send a chill through every human vein. Even New York, Maryland, Virginia and South Carolina—in fact, all the English colonial settlements in seventeenth century America—had laws, orders and resolutions of more or less pronounced indigo tint.

But the true blue laws or code was that which terrorized early Connecticut. These, known as capital laws and purporting to punish, according to the penalties prescribed in the Old Testament, those offenses forbidden therein, were enacted in April, 1642. The texts of Scripture on which they are based were added to each law, as dicta probantia, showing the divine authority by which they were defending, and are singular specimens of jurisprudence.

For instance, witchcraft is one of the first offenses taken up. It is enacted that "if a man or woman be a witch or hath consulted with a familiar spirit they shall be put to death." And "if any man steal a man or mankind or sell him or be found in his hand he shall be put to death."

Yet the good colonists made slaves of the Pequot Indians as the regulation punishment for breaking these same blue laws.

The Puritan legislators, having disposed of the ordinary everyday crimes, went on in due course to enact the more minute laws, covering every conceivable misdemeanor, from sneezing in church to crossing a stream otherwise than by the licensed ferry.

It reminds one of De Quincey's ironical observations to the effect that the habit of murder if persisted in may lead insensibly to procreancy and Sabbath breaking.

The following examples, transcribed literally from the best authorities on American colonial history, relate mostly to the heinous crime of Sabbath breaking:

"No one shall run on the Sabbath day or walk in his garden or elsewhere except reverently to and from meeting."

"No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep house, cut hair or shave on the Sabbath day."

"No woman shall kiss her child on the Sabbath or fasting day."

"The Sabbath shall begin at sunset on Saturday."

"If any man shall kiss his wife or wife kiss her husband on the Lord's day the party in fault shall be punished at the discretion of the court of magistrates."

(Tradition says a gentleman of New Haven after an absence of some months reached home on the Sabbath and, meeting his wife at his door, kissed her with an appetite and for his temerity in violating this law the next day was arraigned before the court and fined for so palpable a breach of the law on the Lord's day.)

"No one shall read common prayer, keep Christmas or saints' days, make minced pies, dance, play cards or play on any instrument of music except the drum, trumpet and Jewsharp."

It is said by Peters in his "History of Connecticut" that these laws were the laws made by the people of New Haven previous to their incorporation with Saybrook and Hartford colonies and, as he says, "were very properly termed blue laws—i. e., bloody laws."

"for," says he, "they were all sanctified with excommunication, confiscation, fines, banishment, whipping, cutting off the ears, burning the tongue and death."—New York Sun.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Braintree, in said County of Norfolk, on the twenty-sixth day of March, A. D. 1918, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted. And the petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week for three consecutive weeks in the Weymouth Gazette, a newspaper published in said Weymouth, the last publication to be one day or more before said Court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-seventh day of February, A. D. 1918.
JOHN D. CORB, Register.

The Author of "The Law of the Land," "Heart's Desire," "The Mississippi Bubble," "The Way of a Man," Etc.

His picturesque romance of antebellum days in the South and Middle West, describing political conditions at the epoch making "Mississippi Compromise" times, is one of unusual power. It has a hero and a heroine of most striking qualities.

ON THE FARM

This Column Alone Cost Us More Than $200. a Year. You Can Have it a Year for $2.00 and the Rest of the Paper for Nothing.

There is no loss of any account in burning the dead grass on meadows; the ashes left are of more immediate use than the dry grass would be.

Don't be in too big a hurry. It's unwise to work soil when it is soggy and very wet. Wait until it dries into a crumbly, workable condition.

A crop of beans can be grown and marketed cheaper than a crop of corn and are much easier on the land, being a nitrogen gatherer.

During the breeding season mate one drake with four ducks until the last of April, then diminish the number of drakes to one drake to five or six ducks.

Everybody knows how discouraging it is to make a pig that has once been stunted, grow well. It is like starting a freight train. It takes more fuel and time than it does to keep it going. Push from the start.

Horse owners of the country lose tens of thousands of dollars annually through failure to recognize the danger in not giving work horses opportunity for exercise when not at work and while a nearly full feed is kept up.

Cows need light, not only for their own health and comfort, but because good butter cannot be made from the milk of cows kept in dark stables. Air, light, cleanliness and warmth are four essentials of a cow stable where cows are kept for profit.

In the garden land plaster is exceedingly variable in its effects. Some of the most marked benefits from its use have been noticed upon vines during a drought. If applied over the surface of the hill and vines during a drought so severe that the leaves droop at midday, they will, in a couple of days, show no signs of drooping but exhibit unusual vigor.

Cabbage soil can not well be made too rich. Very early cabbage is secured by starting the plants ahead of the season and setting them in the open as frost is past. Early maturing seed should be used, and the plants given frequent cultivation with liquid manuring as soon as heads begin to form.

Mixing lime with any kind of manure will cause decomposition quickly, but at the loss of the volatile matter. It will not be beneficial to use lime with manure, except when about to apply the manure to the land, for then the soil, which is usually damp, will arrest the escape of ammonia, especially if the manure be harrowed in or well incorporated with the soil.

It is an easy matter to overtax a young vine by endeavoring to make it produce and ripen more fruit than it is capable of doing. A young vine cannot yield the crop that an older, matured vine can without injury, any more than a young boy or girl can do the work of an adult, and it is unreasonable to expect it in the one case as in the other.

Many lone farmers own more than sixty acres of land, and yet they attempt to farm it all without hired help. They can not secure the help, and they scratch over the land in a hit-and-miss way every year, with low crop yields and the soil gradually running down. Where one has more land than he can well cultivate, and does not wish to sell a part of it, one of the wisest thing to do is to set the surplus portion to young trees to be grown for timber purposes, and if an extra field can be spared, this should be made into a woods pasture.

Have you ever noticed that pigs have very thin hair? They have not a protecting, warm coat like chickens, calves, colts, lambs and some other animals. Have you ever noticed how little pigs will crawl under straw and other bedding when it is cold? They pile upon one another and squeal in cold weather, each trying to get a warmer place in the bed. This shows that pigs are hurt by the cold. We should make their houses warm for winter, and give them deep and warm beds of straw to sleep in. They will grow and fatten better if they are warm and comfortable in their beds.

Carelessness in mating the flock is one source of infertile eggs. Too many keep roosters indiscriminately for several years. No care is taken to mate unrelated birds, hence much inbreeding and weakness are the result. It is always best to select good hens or mature pullets for this purpose. Confine them in a commodious yard to themselves and mate them with enough vigorous male birds to secure perfect fertilization. Either cut down the number of laying hens to furnish eggs for incubation, or place more male birds with the flock. Twelve hens to one male bird are enough, and fewer would be better. Be sure that the male birds are not closely related to the females.

Monday Club.

The regular meeting of the Monday club of Weymouth was held on Monday afternoon, March 17, at Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth. The president, Mrs. Arthur V. Harper, presided, with Mrs. Winslow M. Tirrell, secretary. In her office after her much regretted absence by club members on account of illness.

At the business meeting, Mrs. Jennie B. Worster read a most interesting report on the mid-winter meeting of the State Federation of Woman's Clubs held in the Arlington street church, Boston, February, 12, 1913.

In her remarks Mrs. Worster, quoting from the president of the Charity club, the hostess club of the day, spoke of their hospital on Parker Hill where four thousand women have been treated in twenty-three years.

From remarks by Mrs. Rich, chairman of the Legislative Dept. of the Federation, Mrs. Worster read the following legislative measures, which were endorsed:— Bill for establishing a National Health Service, Page-Wilson bill for Vocational Training, Uniform Child Labor Law, Extension of Civil Service Rules and the Anti-Polygamy Bill. The Spanish War Veteran Preference bill was disapproved.

Hon. Joseph Walker spoke on "The Making of a Law," in his speech, and Mrs. Worster quotes, "If the women of England who are fighting for their rights only had the right to appeal to the majority of the voters, it would make a difference to their cause."

He thought if Labor Unions could also have this privilege, there would be more peaceable adjustment of labor problems.

At the afternoon session Prof. Lueblin was introduced and spoke on "Saving and Spending." Mrs. Worster's very interesting remarks from his speech closed her report of the day.

Mrs. Eugene Carter, chairman of the Tuberculosis Fund, reported the financial condition of the same as very encouraging.

At the close of the business meeting, Mrs. Harper presented the ever popular lecturer, Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd who spoke on "Panama and the Canal." Mrs. Todd's popularity was shown not only by the club members being present in goodly numbers to greet her, but by the presence of former club members and many guests from clubs of the surrounding towns.

She has a pleasing personality and is a fluent speaker and gave a most vivid picture of the canal, in construction, the different nations represented in that construction, their homes, social life and interests, the sanitary conditions and the wonderful improvements of the same.

She also spoke of our patriotism as being unbending when one realizes the difficulties that have been conquered, which have daunted other nations, to turn the danger spots of tropical swamps and disease breeding regions into clean, healthful and attractive localities, where workmen may live in comfort while performing their tasks to watch the progress and dual triumph of intelligent, honorable energy over material and moral obstacles and that all this has been made possible by our own United States.

Mrs. Todd paid a glowing tribute to Dr. Gorgas who is the head of the sanitary department and who with Mr. Shouts and Mr. Stevens, started this glorious work.

The special guests of the club on this afternoon were members of the senior shorthand class of the Weymouth High school. Miss Mildred Newcomb entered, trained with piano solos. A cake and candy sale was held during the afternoon under the chairmanship of Mrs. J. Herbert Walsh.

One of Erskine's Puns.

Lord Erskine rather prettily combined pun with compliment in an epigram he forwarded to Lady Payne in answer to her vicious inquiries as to his health:

"Tis true I am ill, but I need not complain, For he never knew pleasure who never knew Payne."

—Boston Post.

For Economy.

The Farmer—Your horse's shoes are badly worn. He needs a new set all round. Mrs. Pennywise—Dear me! Can't you half sole them and sew up the rips?—Exchange.

Slow.

"The hired man fell off the fence down in the meadow lot just now." "Had he hit the ground when you left?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"What does the busy bee teach us, Freddie?" "Not to go too near the hive, uncle."—London Tatler.

The Bride on Hospitality.

[Written for the Gazette and Transcript.] The Benedict had something on his mind, as the Bride could plainly see, but she was content to wait for him to divulge it. She could see it was not bad news because there was no shadow of gloom about him; just an atmosphere of suppressed excitement.

Presently her patience was rewarded. "Beloved," he began, "have we an engagement for next Thursday night?"

"No, Jack, why?"

"Would you be willing I should invite Mr. and Mrs. Belding here for dinner?"

"Of course. I'm very glad you have asked them."

He flashed her a surprised look. "I didn't say I had."

"But you have."

"Yes," he confessed, "but how do you know so much?"

"Partly by knowing you so well," she acknowledged playfully.

"Well, you see Belding really surprised the invitation out of me. As I think of it now, I believe he hinted unmercifully. I was afraid afterward that you might not like it."

"Oh yes, I do. What's the use of a home of our own if we can't invite people when we want them?"

"To be sure," granted the Benedict, "but Mrs. Belding, I am not sure she is a person you really want to invite. You know she is rolling in wealth, though Belding insists on earning his own bread and butter. She may be arrogant for all I know."

"Let her be what she may," challenged the Bride. "I guess we can find something in common for the short space of one evening. I'll call on her tomorrow, a thing I should have done long ago. She has been here nearly a month."

"And for the dinner you'll get in Bridget's sister to wait on table," suggested the Benedict.

"Why should I do that?" inquired the Bride.

"Because the Beldings have a number of servants. They are used to good service."

"Nonsense!" refuted the Bride. "We are not trying to show the Beldings that we know how they live. We are going to let them see how we live. You know, Jack, I believe that is one reason why there isn't more of the old-fashioned hospitality and breaking of bread together. People are so afraid to be one jot behind their guests in points of service. I claim that people enjoy variety and they like occasionally to eat a meal without the constant oversight of a servant."

"Perhaps you are right, Beloved; you you generally are," acceded the Benedict. "But are you prepared to have the fair unknown report to her friends that the ways of our house are very primitive, don't you know?"

"Mercy, yes! I shall not mind in the least. She will find the table clean, the food wholesome, and the conversation free from gossip. Beyond that I don't care what she thinks."

"Good for you, Beloved! That's a real declaration of independence and I believe it will save you some wrinkles and many a gray hair."

FAIRMOUNT CEMETERY CIRCLE.

Annual Fair, Held Wednesday in Odd Fellows' Hall, East Weymouth, a Grand Success.

With good sized crowds present, both in the afternoon and in the evening, the annual fair of the Fairmount Cemetery Circle was held in the Odd Fellows' Opera House, East Weymouth, on Wednesday afternoon and evening.

The doors were opened to the public at three o'clock, and a large number were attracted to the hall in the afternoon, to purchase the large stock on the many tables and booths.

The sales tables were in charge of the following ladies of the circle:

Chair—Mrs. Melzar S. Burrell, chairman; Mrs. George H. Bass, Mrs. A. L. Flint, Mrs. Owen S. Chandler, Mrs. William A. Whenton, Mrs. C. E. Cushing. Children—Mrs. David Sterling, chairman; Mrs. Albert Humphrey, Mrs. Charles Harrington, Mrs. Frank Holmes and Mrs. Otis Wing.

Fancy—Mrs. Frank Sylvester, chairman; Mrs. Charles R. Denbroeder, Mrs. W. M. Tirrell, Mrs. Arthur Corbitt, Mrs. Leonard T. Mitchell.

Apron—Mrs. J. R. Totman, chairman; Mrs. Samuel W. Burrell, Miss Susie E. Raymond, Mrs. S. B. Totman.

Punch—Miss Mildred Newcomb and Miss Susie Humphrey.

Snip—Mrs. Charles D. Gibson and Mrs. Sadie Belcher.

Candy—Mrs. Clara Wilder, Mrs. Harry Tabor, Mrs. Jennie Morton.

Supper—Mrs. George E. Farrar, chairman; Mrs. Warren Tirrell, Mrs. Clara Maynard and Mrs. Harry E. Bearce.

Ice cream—Mrs. A. L. Flint and young lady assistants.

In the evening, a comic operetta in one act, entitled "Beans and Buttons," consisting of various suggestions as to matrimony, duelling and sentiment, was presented by the following South Weymouth talent: John Bean, Sr., relict of the late Mrs. John Bean, Stephen Pratt; John Bean, Jr., son of aforesaid, who through long separation has ceased to know him; Philip Greeley; Mrs. Augusta Bilton, widow, Miss Annie Deane; Miss Augusta Bilton, her daughter, Mrs. Philip Greeley; and Miss Margaret Howe, accompanist.

All the parts were extremely well acted and the talent was highly applauded at the close of the act.

A large audience was present in the evening and all enjoyed themselves to the utmost. The chairman of the tables and booths all report large sales and it is safe to say that a large sum was netted for the use of the circle the coming year.

The fair was directly in charge of the following:

Mrs. B. S. Lovell, president; Mrs. Melzar S. Burrell and Mrs. Charles Harrington, vice presidents; Mrs. W. E. Ames, treasurer, and Mrs. Mary R. Flint, secretary.

Weymouth Board of Trade.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trade will be held at the Clapp Memorial building next Thursday evening.

The management has been able to secure as the speaker of the evening, Hon. Frank H. Pope of Leominster and his subject will be "Our Transportation System." As Mr. Pope is one of the most able speakers in the state and the subject is one of the most important of the day and one with which he is thoroughly familiar, every member of the Board of Trade and also every prospective member should avail himself of this opportunity to get information which may be a benefit to Weymouth as a whole and also to every individual citizen.

All citizens who are in sympathy with the work of the Board of Trade, i.e., a "busher, bigger and better" Weymouth, are invited to this meeting and also to join the club and lend a hand in municipal improvement.

Bowling Trophy.

One of the handsomest bowling trophies ever put up as a prize in a bowling league is the one now on exhibition in the windows of George R. Kemp's drug store in Washington square, Weymouth. The trophy was purchased by the four teams in the Foresters of America Bowling league, consisting of the John Adams, Roger Wolcott, John Erickson and Monatiquot Courts.

The trophy is a large silver bottle pin, set on a pedestal, the whole piece standing about twenty inches in height.

As Court Monatiquot of this town is now in the lead in the league series, it looks as if the trophy would stay right here in Weymouth Landing.

EASTER PARTY.

Large Gathering at Immaculate Conception Associates Affair in Town Hall, East Weymouth Wednesday Night.

The Easter party given in the Town hall at East Weymouth on Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Immaculate Conception Associates for the benefit of the building fund of St. Jerome's Catholic church at North Weymouth, was largely attended and was a decided social and financial success.

Flanagan's singing orchestra of ten pieces, led by James Flanagan of Marlboro, rendered a concert program from 8 to 9 o'clock and then came dancing until 1 o'clock.

An unusually large number of electric lights festooned from the center to the sides of the hall furnished the decorations. During the intermission, refreshments were served in the lower hall.

The floor director was J. E. Lynch and he was assisted by Joseph Buckley and Edward Butler. The members of the associates comprised the corps of aids.

CELEBRATES 76th BIRTHDAY.

Otis Cushing, South Weymouth's Veteran Expressman Receives Large Number of Friends in Honor of Anniversary.

Otis Cushing, South Weymouth's veteran expressman and one of the best known men in this vicinity, celebrated his 76th birthday last Sunday at his home on Main street, South Weymouth, by receiving a large number of friends, who called to congratulate him on his birthday. He was remembered with many gifts by his large circle of friends.

Mr. Cushing is hale and hearty and is actively employed every day. He was born in Hingham in 1839, the son of David Cushing, who conducted a farm and did a teaming and express business. At very early age Mr. Cushing was considered one of the best drivers of cattle in Massachusetts. At the age of sixteen he drove a four horse express wagon over the road to Boston from South Hingham daily.

In 1860 he came to South Weymouth and engaged in business on his own account. At the time that he started in the express business, there were no trains to Boston, all the expressing being done by teams.

Mr. Cushing was an active member of the fire department for fifteen years, entering the service in the days that hand tools were in use. He advanced during his service to the chief of the department, holding this office for some time. Mr. Cushing is the proud possessor of a gold badge, suitably inscribed, which was presented to him by citizens in the '60s for the fine work he performed at a large fire at Nash's Corner.

Mr. Cushing is much interested in hand tub musters and has officiated at several musters during the last few years.

He has always been an active worker for the success of the annual Firemen's ball and is greatly interested in the Relief association work.

He is a charter member of Wildey Lodge, I. O. O. F. and is connected with Orphans' Hope Lodge A. F. & A. M. and South Shore Commandery K. T. of East Weymouth. He married Caroline F. Hersey of Hingham, who died about twelve years ago. He has four children living. They are Mrs. Flora Burrell, Miss Abbie Cushing and Lewis H. Cushing of South Weymouth and Mrs. Anna F. Richards of Abington.

Howley-Bowles.

The following article that appeared in the issue of "The Republic" of Saturday March 22, should be of interest to many of the town people:

"Of interest to a wide circle will be the announcement on Easter Monday night by Miss Mary Elizabeth Bowles, Cypress road, Brighton, of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Katherine V. R. Bowles, to Mr. J. Walter Howley, 3d, of East Weymouth.

The bride-elect is a daughter of the late John F. Bowles, of Meriden, Ct., and a grand-niece of Gen. Alexander W. Bowles of Virginia. Her mother, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Bowles, is a member of the Reynolds family of Connecticut, the first Catholic family in Meriden. Miss Bowles is a graduate of the Cambridge Conservatory of Music and a member of the Cambridge Symphony orchestra. She plays first violin in the orchestra of the Church of St. Columbkil, Brighton.

Mr. Howley is an official in the South Shore District of the Bay State Railway Company. He is prominent in athletics and a member of an old Weymouth family.

CITIZENS ASSOCIATION.

State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens Speaker at Wednesday Evening's Meeting.

The Citizens Association held a meeting in Pythian hall, Weymouth, Wednesday evening and all who attended were treated to one of the finest addresses it has ever been the pleasure of a Weymouth audience to listen to.

The lady friends of the members of the association were special guests.

President R. B. Worster presided and with a few words of welcome, introduced as speaker of the occasion, Hon. Elmer A. Stevens, treasurer of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Stevens is a fluent and interesting talker and he held the closest attention of his hearers to the finish.

He took for his subject "Some of the Activities of the Commonwealth." He spoke at length on the committee reports for enlarging the present state house in Boston and gave figures and facts in regard to the two proposed plans for the additions. He spoke of the many offices out side of the statehouse, that were costing the state $72,000 a year for rent, and declared that something must be done soon to relieve the situation. New plans, he said, as proposed by the committee of which Mr. Stevens is a member, would not interfere with the present appearance of the state house, and in building the proposed addition, in 20 years the new sections would be paid for, and the expenditure of so much rent stopped entirely.

Mr. Stevens stated that so many new commissions were responsible for the much needed room, and thought that these commissions were being chosen too frequently and that a part of them were entirely unnecessary.

He spoke on the great credit the state of Massachusetts has in other states and countries in the universe, and gave several instances of the value of Massachusetts bonds as they are held by other states and individuals.

Later he gave a very interesting discourse on the charitable and prison work in our state. He said that 41 percent of the running expenses of the state was used in charitable and prison reformatory work. Mr. Stevens gave several instances of the fine work being done for the insane, the feeble minded, lepers and others under the state charge.

Immigration and the lack of knowledge of the U. S. ways and customs were in a large degree responsible for a large share of the running expenses, as these people must be looked after and turned into good citizens, and Mr. Stevens concluded his intensely interesting talk with an appeal to his audience, not to believe that state institutional work is being overdone, but to help increase the good work in our prisons, reformatory institutions and hospitals, to help make better men and women in the Bay State.

Mr. Stevens was given a rising vote of thanks on motion by Edwin Hunt.

After the address, a short business session was held and five new members were added to the membership.

The secretary, W. S. Wells, was appointed as a delegate to attend the next meeting of the Board of Trade, to agitate a "safe and sane" celebration for Fourth of July.

On the question of improving the appearance of the unsightly places around the Weymouth depot, W. E. Thompson, Dr. Bullock and F. W. Stewart were appointed as a committee to look into the matter.

Arrangements are being made for a Ladies' night in Pythian Hall on April 18.

Good Fellowship Club.

The last of the series of suppers and entertainments for the season, by the Good Fellowship club of the Congregational church, East Weymouth, was held in the banquet room of the church last night and notwithstanding the gale and rain, there was a good attendance.

The supper was a well served one of hot roast beef, mashed potatoes, string beans, strawberry short cake, ice cream, cake, biscuit, coffee and chocolate.

At the conclusion of the supper, the president, W. C. Earl called upon Rev. W. H. Commons for a few remarks to which he responded and then introduced the speaker of the hour, W. M. Trotter, editor of the "Guardian," Boston.

Mr. Trotter is a colored man and his theme was "The Colored American Citizen on the Fifteenth Anniversary of Emancipation."

For an hour and a half, Mr. Trotter held the most close attention of his hearers as he portrayed the part taken by his race in every event of American history, from the landing of Columbus to the present time, as there has been no event in which the colored man has not been a factor and has today able and brilliant men in all the walks of life.

FIFTH GRAND FAIR.

Pond Plain Improvement Society Conducting Three Days' Sale and Entertainments in Music Hall, South Weymouth.

The fifth annual fair of the Pond Plain Improvement association began in Music hall, South Weymouth yesterday afternoon and will continue today and tomorrow with attractive entertainments to-night and tomorrow evening.

The event opened yesterday afternoon at three o'clock and a large number was present and patronized the well stocked booths of every description.

The entertainment last evening was furnished by Dadman and Johnson, two high class entertainers, who presented their original comedy and musical sketch entitled "A Mistaken Identity." The playlet is replete with songs and duos, both instrumental and vocal, and is also complete with Irish comedy and novelties.

Following the act by this pleasing pair, McDonald and Erskine presented their one-act sketch "The Messenger Boy" which was greatly enjoyed by all. Orchestral selections were given throughout the evening and the first afternoon and evening was voted to be a decided success. The fair continues this afternoon and evening and tomorrow afternoon and evening.

This afternoon at 2:30 a baby show is to be held and prizes are to be awarded to the heaviest and lightest babe, the one with the earliest hair and the one with the bluest eyes. This evening an hour of special vaudeville and musical entertainment will be presented while tomorrow evening an "amateur night" is to be held with prizes for the best three acts. This entertainment promises to be a decided feature and a large crowd should be on hand to greet the "amateurs." A complete report of the entire fair will be published in next week's issue of this paper.

Theodore Torrey, a Member of the Sheffield Scientific School, on Inspection Tour Through New York and Pennsylvania.

Theodore Torrey of this place was one of the party of 66 students of the Mechanical Engineering Department of Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University, that went on the recent inspection trip through New York and Pennsylvania.

The party started from New Haven on March 12 for Holyoke. While there they visited the Holyoke Water Power Co. plant and also the Crocker-McClellan Paper Co. Next the trip was made to Schenectady, where the General Electric Co., American Locomotive Works, Watervliet Arsenal and other places were visited.

The route next took the party in and around New York where many places of interest were taken in, including the Engineering Societies Building and Waterside station, Edison Co.

Philadelphia came next where the Landers Point Pumping Station was visited as well as the Curtis Publishing Co. plant and Independence Hall and the shop of William Cramp and Sons.

On March 19, the party wound up their trip in South Bethlehem, where the Bethlehem Steel Works were inspected.

Mr. Torrey reports that the trip was one of much interest and very instructive in every way.

BIRTH AND BABYHOOD OF THE TELEPHONE.

Thomas A. Watson, Who Worked With Bell, Gave Most Interesting Talk.

Thomas A. Watson, the man who a little less than 40 years ago, was associated with Professor Alexander Graham Bell in the experiments that resulted in the discovery of the telephone, gave a delightful talk last night in Colonial hall, before an audience that would have been much larger, had the general public realized the interesting nature of the lecture. It was given under the auspices of Lowell chapter, Telephone Employees' Association, and the public was invited.

It was this same Mr. Watson, whose voice transmitted the first message heard in Lowell, over the telephone from Boston, while the new and wonderful discovery was in its infancy. At that time Professor Bell was picking out his finances by satisfying a demand for public lectures with experiments; and Lowell was one of the cities in which the professor spoke, and in which Mr. Watson's voice was faintly but distinctly heard, from the laboratory in Boston.

"The Birth and Babyhood of the Telephone" was the subject of the lecture last night. The president of the association, S. T. Cushing of Somerville, presided, and presented Dr. Moses G. Parker, who in turn introduced the speaker. "When I first heard this gentleman's voice," said Dr. Parker, "it was in Huntington hall, after Professor Bell had spoken to us. A little, hoarse instrument hung in the hall, and Watson, in Boston, spoke to the audience. We heard his voice, rather low, but distinct, say, 'Good evening. How do you do?'"

Mr. Watson told his story of the birth of the telephone to an audience that sat entranced.—Lowell Courier and Citizen.

"KEN" NASH MAKING GOOD.

South Weymouth Boy and Brown University Star Playing Fast Game at Shortstop for Toledo Nine of American Association.

Reports from the training camp of the Toledo team of the American Association state that "Ken" Nash, the South Weymouth boy, is playing a very fast game at short stop. Nash is considered fully as fast as Chapman, last year's shortstop, now with the Cleveland Americans, and if Nash can bat at the 250 clip, will hold down shortstop this season with ease.

Nash is a high-class fielder, a clever base-runner, an excellent hitter and possesses the necessary amount of gray matter to make him one of the best short stoppers in the country and his many "mashers" predict that with another season's experience in minor league ball, Ken will be back in the big show in 1914.

EASTER MONDAY BALL.

Court Monatiquot No. 150, Foresters of America Celebrate in Bates' Opera House, Weymouth, Last Monday Evening.

With excellent weather conditions, and an extra large crowd, the annual Easter Monday ball of the Court Monatiquot No. 150, Foresters of America, was held in Bates' opera house in Weymouth last Monday evening and the affair proved to be one of the most successful in the history of the order.

Cull's wellknown orchestra of five pieces was in attendance and furnished music for the dancing from eight until one o'clock.

The floor director was Llewellyn Thomas. He was ably assisted by Henry Bentley as assistant floor director; Stanley E. Walsh, chief of the aids, and the following corps of aids:—T. P. Cleary, Milton B. Richmond, C. O'Connell, William Coyle, J. Griffin, H. Daley, J. J. Curley, J. Hagarly, J. Curran, J. DeNell, A. Archibald, M. Lyons, H. Smith and M. L. Cleary.

WILDEY LODGE, I. O. O. F.

Enjoyable Musical Entertainment Given in Odd Fellows' Hall, South Weymouth, Last Thursday Evening.

Under the auspices of Wildey Lodge, I. O. O. F., a two-part musical entertainment was presented before a large gathering at Odd Fellows hall, Independence square, South Weymouth, last Thursday evening.

Part one consisted of solos by Miss Luthera Stratton, soprano; Miss Florence M. Hersom, alto; Ernest H. Page, tenor; Clifford Wood, bass, with Miss Ruth D. Garland as reader.

The second part was an "old folks" concert program rendered by the same singers in costumes of olden times. Miss Garland was the accompanist.

Boy Scouts of America.

Troops No. 2, East Weymouth, held its regular meeting in its rooms at the Congregational church on Friday evening, March 21.

The president, Scout John Dizer was in the chair. After the roll call reports were heard from the entertainment committee and the athletic committee.

On Thursday evening, March 20, the troop was entertained by Charles B. Cushing at his home. Mr. Cushing's victory gave ample proof of its ability to entertain and a variety of selections were enjoyed by the Scouts. As a supplement to this musical feast, the Scouts were requested to proceed to the dining room, ice-cream, fancy cakes and home made taffy was served them. Afterward one of the Scouts was heard to remark, "I have had the time of my life." As an appreciation of Mr. Cushing's kindness, a rising vote of thanks was tendered him at the meeting on Friday evening.

It has been decided by the troop to have a baseball team. Assistant Scout Master MacFawn has been elected manager of the team and a schedule will soon be arranged. Most of the boys are candidates for the different positions and a nine worthy of the name of Scouts ought to be developed.

Plans are under way for an all day outing on the 19th of April. Some suitable place for a camp will be selected, about an hour's hike distant. It is expected that a troop from Dorchester will join us in our trip and if they do so, probably sports will be arranged. This matter is in charge of the executive committee.

It is expected that the new banner of the troop will be christened on the 19th of April. The banner is now in the hands of the manufacturer.

A short time ago Scout Master MacFawn accompanied by Scouts John Dizer and Norman Dizer took a hike to North Weymouth. They visited a troop of Dorchester Scouts who were in camp on the shore. The troop was in charge of Scout Master W. B. Hunt. The boys were passing one of the tests for a second class scout. Each boy had to make a fire and cook a piece of meat. The boys were very generous and treated the guests to samples of their cooking.

The executive committee met at the home of Mr. MacFawn on Tuesday evening. Plans were completed for a scout social to be held at the church on Friday evening, April 4th. Each scout will be allowed to bring a guest, either male or female, as he prefers and each member of the troop will be called upon to furnish his share of entertainment. Scout refreshments will be served.

ON THE FARM

This Column Alone Cost Us More
Than $200. a Year. You Can Have it a Year for $2.00 and the Rest of the Paper for Nothing.

Nothing on the farm pays better than a good garden. It furnishes fresh fruits and vegetables and promotes health.

Hold on a bit; don't begin to plow too soon. Be sure that the soil is not too wet. To plow wet ground is a hole in the pocket.

How about grape vines? The quickest fruit to yield return, and one of the most healthful. A family, with plenty of this invaluable fruit, has little occasion to apprehend an attack of fevers.

As the nights are still cold it is advisable to give the hens but eleven eggs at the time of sitting them. This affords the hen a better chance to cover and warm the eggs properly, bringing forth better results.

The season is again near at hand for planting trees, shrubs, vines and plants, and no time should be lost in preparing all the requisites so as to be in readiness for planting at the first opportunity.

When the sow has been properly fed on coarse and cooling foods, so that she is not in a feverish condition, she may be expected to do well unless overfed after the pigs are born. This is often the case and the effects are very injurious. Strong food of any kind should be avoided, as it tends to inflame the blood.

The cheapest way of getting started in the business of breeding fine poultry is to buy eggs and hatch them. Ten or a dozen chicks are often produced from a sitting of eggs, which may be purchased for less than the cost of a single first-class fowl, and any one of the chicks is worth more than the total outlay.

The farmer who owns a good milk cow, naturally desires to keep it for milk,
if not for breeding, as long as possible.
It will even pay to cut feed and mix it with meal for winter after her teeth are so far gone that she cannot masticate harder material. But when the end comes it is often better to sell her for what she will fetch than to fatten her. The amount of valuable feed required to put flesh on the frame of an old cow if given to a good milker would pay better.

Make your dead furrows, in breaking up the ground, at different places each year, and avoid situations which will start washes. You had better curve them around a slope, if possible, than to run them directly up and down it. With a "split log drag" there is little need for any depression to remain at all. Once a few trips on each side, drawing the dirt in, will eliminate the prospective gully.
A great deal of the washes about a farm are the result of either neglect or slovenliness.

No matter how small the plot owned or rented may be, the one who can be tow a portion of time to the cultivation of garden crops this spring should do so. There are some things grown in a garden that can not easily be procured in market, when the freshness and quality are considered. No one can buy tomatoes in market equal to those taken from the vines and placed on the table. If a plot is very fertile, and is no larger than half an acre, the amount of produce that can be given thereon will supply an ordinary family from early spring until late in the fall.

I believe in abundant exercise and nutritious feed for cows and young stock.
I believe that a heifer bred for milk production can not be ruined for that purpose by too good feeding previous to her first calving.

I believe that the most important time to practice good feeding with a dairy cow is when she is dry.

I believe that a soft, comfortable bed to lie on will be reciprocated by the cow in an increasing milk flow. Likewise by absorbing the liquid manure we double the fertilizing value of the animal excrement.—Cowboy, in Farm and Dairy.

A wonderfully realistic cover of pink tulips gives a hint of the Spring flavor running all through the April issue of Suburban Life—The Countryside Magazine, and makes one long for a bit of ground in which to "putter." The garden and all about it is discussed in small articles as "How shall we furnish the garden?", "Our little Japanese garden,"
"Some snapshots in my garden," "The uses of color in plants," "My back-yard garden" and others. Then there is a leading article on "Houses that Blend with their surroundings" which tells of a successful venture in making a "suburb beautiful." Both the bee enthusiast and the "would be" apiarist will find much to interest them in "Keeping Bees for Pleasure and Profit," by a busy business man who has really accomplished great things in this line. "How a success was made of a modest poultry farm" tells of real money made with chickens. Besides all this, "The story of an American farm" grows in interest as the owner gets several more departments of his "factory farm" started.

W. H. S. BASEBALL.

Candidates to be Called Out Next Monday for First Practice.

The first call for candidates for the Weymouth High school baseball team has been issued by Coaches Carter and Cosgrove and with the beginning of the final three months of school on next Monday, the first practice session will be held and plans perfected and the team picked for the coming season. As the school is blessed with a fine pitching staff this spring in Ray Condrick, Harry Burrell and Munroe, a most successful year is looked for. Wall and Humphrey, last year's stars will be missed, as this pair were veterans, and were fine hitters and fast on the bases.

Behind the bat this year, Leo Fraher is expected to fill Wall's shoes, and "Toby" should make a very fast catcher. On the mound, Ray Condrick, last year's C. M. A. star has the call as first string pitcher.
Harry Burrell should be a close second to Condrick and with Munroe, the crack Union A. C. out for the pitching position the team is well fortified in the box. At first base Baker will probably again show his skill, while Gorman, Reilly, Bates and several others will attempt to make good at second base, short-stop and third base.
Murphy and Glover, last year's fielders will cavort in the outfield and with a large squad of new men, the coaches will have their hands full picking the fastest team to open the season against Everett High at Everett on April 16. Manager Cosgrove of the faculty and Student Manager Lewis Nolan announce the following schedule to date:

April 16 Everett at Everett.
" 18 open.
" 19 open.
" 22 Braintree at Braintree.
" 24 Museum of Fine Art at Weymouth.
" 26 Malden at Malden.
" 29 Rockland at Rockland.
May 2 Braintree at Weymouth.
" 5 open.
" 8 Quincy at Quincy.
" 10 Mechanics Arts at Weymouth.
" 13 Rockland at Weymouth.
" 16 South Boston at South Boston.
" 20 open.
" 23 Milton at Milton.
" 27 Medford at Medford.
" 30 Wakefield at Wakefield.
June 3 Quincy at Weymouth.
" 5 Boston College High at Weymouth.
" 10 open.
" 13 Winthrop at Weymouth.
" 17 open.

Several important games are pending, on account of suitable dates. No captain has been elected as yet, but after the first week or two of practice, one of the players will be selected to lead the W. H. S. team of 1913.

SOMETHING YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO MISS

The lovely Josephine St. Auban is the heroine of romantic adventures in the picturesque days that were the pioneer days in the middle west before the civil war.

Warville Dunwoody is a stalwart American, competent and ready to press suit for a beautiful woman's hand in the masterful manner that wins.

But there are risks—grave risks—attending the achievement of his absorbing ambition, thrilling to experience and thrilling to read about.

The story of the adventures of these two interesting people and of their associates is one that will make the hours fly quickly. It is told in "The Purchase Price," the new novel by Emerson Hough, which will shortly appear in serial form in this paper.

Reading Aloud.

[Written for the Gazette and Transcript.]

"Where do we have to go to-night, Benedict?" asked the Benedict as they sauntered back to the den after dinner.

"Nowhere, unless you have some engagement that you haven't yet told me about. Light the fire, Jack, and have your smoke; and then—"

"Then what, Lady Manager?"

"Then read to me. I have a perfectly stupid piece of work to do tonight and I need your very charmingest elocution to keep me contented."

"Charmingest is good," applauded the Benedict. "What is the piece of work you call stupid?"

"Hemming dish towels for the Girls' club. Isn't it queer how I offer to do things for people and then hate myself till they are done. I always stitch my own," you would judge by her tone that the Bride had had twenty years' experience at least, "but Mrs. Emery insisted that these must be hand hemmed."

"Too bad," sympathized the Benedict from the midst of his cloud. "So you think it would help some if I were to read aloud?"

The Bride nodded. "I can do almost any hateful task to the accompaniment of a good story. I very well remember the time Blanche read me through a stint of patchwork Mother set for me. I had been dilatory, we won't say lazy, and Blanche finished her squares first."

"How I hated the steady application necessary to finish my allotment! But Blanche, like the good sister she is, came to the rescue with Little Lord Fauntleroy and Sara Crew. It took them both to get the lame dog over the stile. (You see I still avoid the use of the word lazy.)"

"So I see," laughed the Benedict, pinching her cheek; "you are a little lame and a trifle slow, but not for a moment lazy.
What shall I read?"

"It doesn't matter much. Anything read aloud is so much better than reading to oneself. It is more social in the first place, and gives two people the chance to think the same thoughts. The characters always seem more real to me in a book I have heard some one read."

"Shall you ever forget," broke in the Benedict with a merry twinkle, "the inimitable rolling twang with which Bert used to favor up Bat Masterson and Cimarron Bill in The Sunset Trail?"

"Indeed! never!" declared the Bride,
"nor yet the reeking sea tang we used to get with Isabel's Cape Cod manner of pronouncing Cap'n Eri's witticisms."

"What was it Longfellow got off about reading aloud? I learned it once," puzzled the Benedict.

"Then read from the treasured volume
The poem of thy choice;

And lend to the rhyme of the poet
The beauty of thy voice."

quoted the Bride, as she rummaged in her basket for the implements she must use.
"That's it," the Benedict recognized.
"Great chap Longfellow for knowing how to say a thing. What do you say if I give you a bit of VanDyke? It's about the right time of year that we should brush up our ideas of rods and reels and little rivers."

WHISTLING BUOYS

They Are Simple In Principle and Certain In Operation.

PLAYTHINGS OF THE WAVES.

The Rise and Fall of the Water Give Birth to Their Penetrating Shrieks.
Placing and Removing Them Are Tasks Fraught With Deadly Peril.

Sea travelers up and down our coast lines often hear a strange, weird sound to port or starboard, a sort of compound of moan and shriek, at once soft and insistent, subdued and penetrating. It is the call of the whistling buoy to the man at the helm, warning him of shoal or dangerous place.

These whistling buoys, which are enormous masses of iron, often weighing several tons, are as simple in principle as they are certain in operation. The buoy proper consists of a huge pear-shaped bulb, little end up, on top of which is a powerful whistle, protected from accidental blow or collision by a framework of iron bars, and an air intake. Below and projecting far down into the water is an open tube of metal. The whole thing is secured in position with an anchor and a chain, which last is long enough for the depth of the water in which the buoy is placed to permit the free movement of the mass up and down.

When a wave lifts the buoy up in the air the water in the tube, acting as a piston, sucks in air through the intake. It is confined in the bulb of the buoy by a simple valve which prevents its egress through the intake. When the waves drop the buoy in the trough of the waves the water in the tube presses up on the confined air and compresses it. It finds exit through the whistle, which thus sounds its warning note.

It might be supposed that, having no mechanism but a valve, such buoys, once put in position, could be left there for an indefinite period of time. But the sea has strange ways with her playthings, and even if the necessity of constant painting of the buoy to protect it from the action of sea water was not existent it would still be necessary to keep a watch on these signals and to take them up and replace them rather often, for the big tube projecting down into the water is a great attraction to barnacles and seaweed, and not infrequently these marine growths so interfere with the action of the buoy as to keep it silent in ordinary weather and to dim its voice in bad weather.

It then becomes necessary to "work" a new whistler in position, which is a regular part of the duty of a lighthouse tender or buoy tender, of which vessels there are many in the service.

When a buoy is to be "worked" the tender repairs to a yard or station and by means of her crane lifts on deck the freshly painted and thoroughly repaired new buoy which is to replace that one which is either silent or which has served its allotted time and is now due for replacement.

There is nothing difficult about this. It is getting the enormously large and unwieldy mass of iron overboard and taking on board the one which is in the water which causes the difficulty. The very waves which are necessary to the successful operation of the buoy make it hard to manage at the end of a crane on board a comparatively small vessel.

When a buoy tender goes to "work" a whistler she clears her deck of everything else but the buoy, which is secured with chocks and chains against the roll of the vessel. The old buoy is approached cautiously, within a couple of hundred feet, and the new buoy is allowed to slide overboard rather than picked up and placed in the water, the crew guiding it by guy ropes, while the powerful crane lifts just enough to permit the buoy to move. With the vessel slowly rolling from side to side on the slow seas of even a quiet day—the good days are purposely picked for this work—the mass of freshly painted iron with its long tube presents potentialities for evil which must be closely watched. Let the buoy but get clear of the deck and the fall tackle get jammed and there would come into being a three-ton pendulum with an iron flail thirty-six feet long capable of smashing the boat to bits and certainly of sweeping broken bones men about the deck with no more effort than if they were so many flies.

But, if getting the new buoy overboard is dangerous work, hauling the old one in is more so. The buoy is first secured by good seamanship, managing the steam vessel, with a rope through the iron cage at its top. Working from this, ropes, chains and "springs" or heavy cables are brought into play and the whole very cautiously lifted and secured as it comes over the side. It is allowed to swing free not at all, save perhaps for an instant, just as it is laid flat on the deck, and then, apparently in the very face of death, a dozen men spring at the mass, ready to swing with the waves and to demolish them and thrust huge billets of wood underneath its sides to hold it long enough for lashings to make it secure. The boat being belayed to the anchor chain then cautiously backs away to raise the anchor, and there is a general scampering away from the cable while this is being done, as should it break it would be like having a couple of cannon balls come tearing along the deck.

However, so skillful are these handlers of heavy masses of iron on an unstable keel that it is rare that an accident happens—C. H. Claudy in Scientific American.

TAPPED THE WIRES.

The Good Housewife Had a Pretty Keen Nose For News.

People who would normally think it a disgrace to eavesdrop or spy on their neighbors seem utterly without conscience when the telephone is in question and will rush to the instrument every time the bells ring, whether it is their call or not.

As an evidence of the extreme to which it can be carried I well remember a case where for some unknown reason the bells beyond one of the stations seemed in constant trouble. One time they would operate perfectly, five minutes later they would ring so faintly that it was hard to distinguish the call. The manager was on the verge of prostration, as he had gone over the line a dozen times, trimmed every tree that could possibly have been in the way, adjusted bells—in fact, done everything he could think of.

In despair he came to me and told me his troubles. I suggested that we drive out to the last "good" station and, to his surprise, asked him if he dared walk in without rapping. He said he could, and the two of us entered very unexpectedly, the telephone being in the kitchen at the back of the house.

The picture we found was, to say the least, amusing. The good housewife in her craze not to miss anything had actually rigged up a clamp to hold the receiver on the back of a rocking chair and spent her leisure time in comfortably listening to every word that went over the line. She had even gone so far as to devise a method of opening the primary circuit on her own instrument so that the batteries would not run down.

This is an extreme case, but shows how far some folks can go. The remedy: Just plain common decency and honesty, a bylaw authorizing the manager to take out any telephone whose user is guilty of such dishonesty and a manager with backbone enough to do his duty.—Farm and Fireside.

HE PASSED IT ON.

The Diplomat Saved Himself by a Quick Witted Ruse.

The passing of the court fool as an institution did not mean that kings had ceased to take pleasure in the sort of nonsense that the jesters had been licensed to perpetrate. King Frederick William I. of Prussia was an incorrigible joker and greatly enjoyed testing the cleverness of his ministers and advisers by planning embarrassing situations, from which they could extricate themselves only by the exercise of the quickest wit. However, "Das Buch Fur Alle" declares that the king was almost as ready to enjoy his own discomfiture as that of his intended victim.

One day at a small dinner the king, happening to be in the mood to play a prank, chose as his victim one of his ministers seated at his left. After a moment's thought his majesty leaned toward the courtier on his right and, giving him a gentle slap on the cheek, said, "Pass it."

As the tap was passed from guest to guest round the table, the king's intentions became apparent. The minister at Frederick William's left would either have to commit lese majeste by slapping his sovereign or admit himself beaten and be the laughing stock of the table.

Although the company was already in a gale of merriment at his expense, the minister was not at all ready to acknowledge a defeat. Just as the blow was passed to him he let a knife fall clattering to the floor between the king and himself. Immediately a servant sprang forward, picked the knife up and handed it to the minister, but what was the lackey's astonishment to receive, instead of a word of thanks, a tap on the cheek. The minister by his wit had saved the situation without violating the rules of the game. The king was the first to join in the laughter and applause that greeted the minister's cleverness.

Australian Names.

Mark Twain, native of a country whose place names won the admiration of Robert L. Stevenson, was himself delighted by the place names of Australia. As amusement for a hot day he collected a list of eighty-one, including such soul satisfying polysyllables as Murriwillumbah, Yararyackah, Kondoparinga and Jamberoo, and put sixty-six of them into a poem of forty-eight lines. "These are good words for poetry," he says. "But the best word in that list and the most musical and gurgly is Woolloomooloo."—London Chronicle.

Couldn't Get to Rehearsal.

An actor, being unable to find work on the stage and needing his meals, finally obtained the promise of a conductor's job on the street car lines.

"When do I report?"
"At 4 a. m. sharp," said the manager. "Shades of Booth!" exclaimed the Thespian. "I couldn't stand such hours. The lines would offset the salary. Why, I'd be late for rehearsal every day!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Hungry One.

"Your stomach is so affected that I fear we shall have to operate for its removal."

"All right. Remove it. I never use it anyhow."

"You never use it? What business are you in?"

"I'm a poet."—Houston Post.

Toll Uses in Sales Campaigns

SUCH testimonials as the following from the J. E. SOPER COMPANY, wholesalers of grain and feed at 206 Chamber of Commerce, Boston, furnish unimpeachable testimony of the value of the telephone, especially the toll lines, in sales campaigns.

We quote a paragraph of a letter to the Company from this concern:

"We find that the telephone takes the place, in a large degree, of men on the road, and that our business is done in a much more satisfactory way by having a man sell our goods from the office, as he then knows everything a salesman should know concerning the quality, location and other features of the goods, whereas a man on the road does not always have his information and is frequently induced to guess it, which does not work at all."

We would not suggest this rule in every case. The advantages of face-to-face salesmanship and the magnetism of a personality, coupled with the importance of showing many lines of goods, are not to be depreciated. On standard lines, however, once the salesman's personality is established, the telephone is an efficient auxiliary, and especially helpful to the salesman in making advance appointment.

TRAVELING MEN interested in little stories of the advantages of the telephone as a business auxiliary, are invited to send for "Modern Methods of Money Making." In Metropolitan Boston call the Contract Department, Fort Hill 7600. Elsewhere call the Local Manager.

MRS. TYLEY WHITCOMB MORSE.

North Weymouth's Oldest Resident Passes Away.

Mrs. Tyley Whitcomb Morse, the oldest resident of North Weymouth and widow of the late Noble Morse, suffered an attack of paralysis on March 6, from which she never recovered consciousness and passed away on Friday, March 14, at the advanced age of ninety-two years.

She was born in Braintree, and had lived in North Weymouth nearly 70 years. She was the last of eight brothers and sisters. Mrs. Morse was a member of the Pilgrim Congregational church and has always been ready and willing to render assistance to any one in sickness or trouble, until advancing years prevented active service.

The funeral was held at the home of Fred Benkeford where she had been a member of his family for the past ten years. Rev. Mr. Clark conducted the service. A quartette composed of Mrs. Cushing, Mrs. Dunbar, Mr. Sidelinger and Mr. Williams, sang her favorite hymns, "Abide With Me," and "Nearer, My God, To Thee."

Many beautiful flowers showed the love of relatives and friendly neighbors.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Edmund S. Hunt.

With the passing away of Mrs. Edmund S. Hunt of Weymouth it is fitting that a few words should be said of her rare and remarkable character.

A long and beautiful life has come to a close. For many years a helpless invalid her sufferings borne with a saintly patience and resignation.

A womanly woman in true sense. Of a charming personality, with the dignity and gracious manner of the old school. A gifted mind, with a keen appreciation of all the best in literature; with a love of all that makes life beautiful, and a true lover of Nature. Firm in her convictions, a wise counsellor, possessing a deeply religious spirit, with love and charity for everyone, always lovingly interested in one's joys and sorrows. The uplifting influence of her sweet and helpful companionship will ever linger in the memories of those who were privileged in knowing her.

Such a life is indeed a benediction, and one cannot mourn, only rejoice that, for her, peace and rest have come, and a joyful awakening into the life beyond, where all pain and stress shall cease.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH, NORTH
WEYMOUTH.Interesting Program Held on Easter Sunday.

At the Universalist church on Easter Sunday there were large congregations present at both the afternoon and evening services. In the afternoon the pastor preached an Easter sermon from the text, "Death is Swallowed up in Victory."—1 Cor. 15: 54. The choir rendered the following anthems, "He is Risen, He is Risen," and "Come Sing in Exultation," and Miss Macquinn sang "Christ is Risen" with violin obligato. Master Percy Ames rendered Rubenstein's "Melody in F" on the violin.

At seven o'clock there was an Easter concert by the Sunday school in charge of Mrs. E. R. Sampson, superintendent, assisted by Miss Mabel Sampson and Miss Margaret Dingwall. There were songs and recitations by the children and the school was assisted by H. H. Gooding, cornetist and Master Percy Ames, violinist, which added greatly to the musical program. The church was very beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, Easter lilies, pinks and potted plants, which were afterwards sent to the sick and shut-ins of the parish. The decorating was in charge of Mrs. J. H. Pratt.

Cates World Famous Band Coming to Kincaide Theatre.

If you could read the press reports from all parts of America, Canada and Europe, where Cates Concert Band has appeared, nothing could keep you from the New Kincaide theatre, Quincy, where they begin the three days' engagement Monday next.

The Cates present without a doubt the most pleasing and enjoyable, as well as the greatest and most meritorious musical show ever witnessed hereabout.

One feature of this one act alone is well worth the entire admission: it's Walter H. Cates playing the monster saxophone which stands over six feet tall and is the largest in vaudeville.

Nine other features are also included in next week's program at this near-by playhouse where performances are given daily at 2.30 and 7.45 p. m.

Not Paint.

The worst mistake in painting is not putting off. That costs about 10 percent; you keep your money a year and pay 10 percent for it.

Paint would have to come down 25 percent to make 10 percent on the job, for wages do not go down.

The worst mistake is "cheap" paint. It costs from 50 percent to 100, first cost, and another in wear.

What a liar "cheap" is! "Put-off" is bad enough; "cheap" is ten times worse.

BOWLING NOTES.

Bennie Elkington, captain of team 3 at the C. M. A. is rounding into form at last after several weeks of poor breaks and bad breaks. "Elky" got 300 in three strings in a match last week, which isn't so bad.

The candle-pin race at the Norfolk club is waxing very warm as the finish draws near. All the teams are closely bunched, and the final spurt on the last lap of the league race promises to be most exciting.

At the C. M. A. last Monday evening team 5 P. T. Pearson captain walloped Cunningham's "Pets" three points out of four. The "City" team took two strings and total with 1222 to 1199. Arthur Cunningham was high man with 103 in a single and 293 in three strings.

At the Norfolk club last Thursday night team 2, and team 3 broke even at two points each. Team 2, D. Hall captain, took two strings, while team 3, Loud, captain, took one string and total 1225 to 1211. Frank Loud led with three strings of 285.

THE BEST PROOF.

Weymouth Citizens Cannot Doubt It.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used. They brought benefit. The story was told to Weymouth residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the result lasting. The testimony is from this locality. The proof convincing.

Mrs. H. H. Gilman, 47 S. Gold street, Whitman, Mass., says:—"I am fully convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills are an excellent kidney remedy. Three members of my family have used them with the most satisfactory results. We think more highly of Doan's Kidney Pills than of any other kidney remedy that has ever entered our home." (Statement given October 6, 1908.)

A LASTING EFFECT

Mrs. Gilman was interviewed several years later and added to the above:—"I cheerfully confirm my previous endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills, for the benefit they brought in my family has been permanent. You may continue to publish my statement."

A SPRING POEM.

March the first spring month has come
Of which the poets sing;
And yet there does not seem to be Too many signs of spring.

And yet we really do believe
The winter is most o'er;
And we must soon begin spring work
As we have done before.

This means some changes round the home
For which we must prepare;
And then for cooking will be found
But little time to spare.

Tis then that Whitcomb's famous bread
Your needs will well supply;
Together with a Jelly Roll
A Mince or Apple pie.

CHAPTER II. The Game.

IT is easily earned reputation to state that Josephine St. Auban's was a presence not to be concealed. Even such a boat as the Mount Vernon offered a total deck space so cramped as to leave secrecy or privacy well out of the question.

Apparently they were not unexpected. The ship's clerks readily led the way to apartments which had been secured in advance. Having seen to the luggage of his charges, whom he disposed in a good double stateroom, the leader of the party repaired to his own quarters. Tarrying no longer than to see his own luggage safe aboard he commanded one of the men to fetch him to the office of the captain.

"Captain Rogers," began Carlisle. "You have been advised to some extent of my plans by telegram from Washington."

The captain hesitated. "Is this with the lady's consent? Are there any charges of any kind against?"

"That is not for you to ask. She is under my care, and must not disembark until I say the word. You will kindly give her a place at my table. There must be no idle curiosity to annoy her. My errand demands secrecy and speed alike. There must be no communication between this boat and the shore, so far as this young lady is concerned. Meantime, if all is ready, it would please me mightily if we could start."

The captain pulled a bell rope. "Tell the mate to cast off," he said to the man who answered. An instant later the hoarse boom of the boat's whistles roared out their warning. Churning the stained waters into foam with her great paddles, the Mount Vernon presently swung slowly out into the narrow stream.

"Now, Captain Rogers," went on Carlisle, tersely, "tell me who's aboard," and presently he began to ponder the names which, in loose fashion, the clerk assembled from his memory and his personal acquaintance.

"Hm, hm," commented the listener. "Very few whom I know. Judge Clayton from the other side, below Cairo State Senator Jones, from Belmont—" "You know Mr. Jones? Old 'Decline and Fall' Jones. He never reads any book excepting Gibbon's 'Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire.' Always declines a drink when offered, but he's sure to fall a moment later!" Thus the smiling clerk.

Even as Carlisle left the captain's room to ascend the stair he met face to face the very man whose presence he least desired. "Dunwoody," he exclaimed.

"I changed my mind at the last moment. It is far more comfortable going down by boat than it is by stage. Then the thought of the pleasure of your society on the journey—" He was smiling rather maliciously.

"Yes, yes, of course," somewhat dismally.

"But now, to be frank with you, you don't seem altogether happy. Why do you want to be rid of me? What harm have I done? When are you going to introduce me as you should to that extremely beautiful young lady who is with you?"

"My very dear sir!" "You are not 'my dear sir' at all so long as you try to hoodwink me," persisted Dunwoody, still smiling. "Come, now, what are you doing here west-mother, daughter, fiancée or sister; who is not?" "It is within a man's rights to choose his own company and his own ways. I am not accountable, except as I choose."

The other man was studying him closely, noting his flush, his irritation, his uneasiness. "But what I am saying now is that it is cruel, unusual, inhuman and unconstitutional to be so selfish about it."

"The lady has expressed a desire to remain quite alone, my dear sir. I must bow to her will. It is her privilege to come and go as she likes."

"She may come and go as she likes?" queried Dunwoody, still smiling. There was a look on his face which caused Carlisle suddenly to turn and examine him sharply.

"Absolutely so."

"Then why should she have sent me this little message?" demanded Dunwoody suddenly.

A still deeper flush spread over the young officer's telltale face. He opened and read: "If you care to aid a woman who is in trouble, come to me at room 19 when you can."

"When did you receive this?" he demanded.

"Within the moment. Her maid brought it."

"You didn't have this before you came on board; but, of course, that wasn't possible."

Dunwoody looked at him keenly. "You have just heard me," he said. "No, I don't deny there are some things here which I can't understand. Come, let's be frank about it. You may trust me, of course. But—neither sister, wife nor servant—could you blame any man, especially any man who had a direct message like this, for wanting or, say, even demanding a meeting? Haven't I the right? Come, now."

"Very good, then. To show how little you know me and how much you wrong both this lady and myself you shall meet her. Not that you have earned the right."

The Mount Vernon, favored by a good stage of water, soon cleared the narrow Monongahela channel, passed the confluence and headed down under full steam, all things promising well for a speedy and pleasant run.

On the upper deck or along the rails of the lower deck many passengers were gazing out at the varying pictures of the passing shores. Not so Carlisle. With eyes cast down he spent most of his time pacing up and down alone. Yet it was not an irresolute soul which reposed beneath the half frigid exterior. He presently arrived upon a plan of action.

The public, too, had its rights, he concluded, and the woman as a woman had her rights also to her good fame. He must not harm her name. Best, then, to disarm suspicion by playing the game wholly in the open. The midday meal now being announced by loud proclamation of the boat's going, he turned and soon rapped at the door of room 19.

Jeanne, the faithful but faithful maid who shared her mistress' fortunes, by this time had done what she could to mend her lady's appearance. Good health and youth as well as good courage fought for Josephine St. Auban as well as good sense and a philosophy of travel learned by experiences in other lands. Her habiliments were such as to cause most of the feminine occupants of the boat to make careful note when she had accepted Carlisle's escort and entered the dining room. The hum of the dingy tables slackened and ceased. A score of women frowned at a score of men whose glances wandered undisturbedly. Who was she, and what?

Meantime Josephine St. Auban's own eyes were not unregardful.

"I see that my guess was quite correct," she said at length, smiling full at her guardian.

At once he caught her thought. "Oh, about Mr. Dunwoody," he assented, assuming a carelessness which she read through at once. "Yes, I met him a while ago. He has keen eyes, has he not?" he added resentfully.

"That is to say—"

"So hard hit that he threatens a duel or worse if I do not at once furter his desire to pursue his acquaintance."

"Indeed?" She kept her eyes fixed on her plate. "Is that all?" she asked at length.

"Madam, you yourself could best answer your own question." He looked at her keenly, not showing his case; not telling her that Dunwoody had shown him her hasty note. Not the flicker of an eyelash betrayed her own thought. Surely, she had courage.

"How delightful!" she resumed at length calmly. "Not that I weary of your company, sir, but I told you my parole was ended when we reached the boat. I told you fairly I should try to escape, and so I shall."

"Our game is somewhat desperate, madam, I admit," said he. "I scarcely know whether you are in my hands or I in yours."

"Now," she rejoined, "as to what I suggest, it is this: You shall leave the boat at Louisville or Cincinnati. Your errand is already sufficiently well done. You have got me out of Washington. Suppose we set Cincinnati as the last point of our common journey?"

"But what then for you, madam?" "As to that I cannot tell. You have brought me into this situation. I must escape from it in my own way."

"You sting me deeply. A thousand times you yourself have made me ashamed. Come, when we part, shall it not be as friends? You have won my respect, my admiration. I wish I were entitled to your own. You've been perfect. You've been splendid."

"Look," she said, without raising her eyelids

He turned. Dunwoody was making his way toward them among the tables.

"My dear senator," said Carlisle, choking down his wrath as the Missourian reached them and bowed his salutations. "I have the greatest pleasure in the world in keeping my promise to you. I am delighted to have you join our little party at this time. You remember the countess—I would say Miss Barron?"

"I have not so soon forgotten," answered Dunwoody. His commanding eyes still sought her face. Beyond a slight bow and one upward glance she did not display interest, yet in truth a sudden shiver of apprehension came into her heart. This was a different sort of man she now must endeavor to handle.

That she had asked the aid of this newcomer was a fact known to all three of them. Yet of the three, none knew precisely the extent of the others' knowledge. Dunwoody at least was polite, if insistent, in his wish to learn more of her.

"I am sure the fatigue of the journey across the mountains must have left you quite weary," he ventured, addressing her.

Josephine St. Alban showed no sign of perturbation as she answered: "Not so weary as busy. The duties of an amanuensis leave one small time for recreation." Her face was demureness itself.

Carlisle caught his cue, with alertness fairly to be called brilliant. "Yes," said he, "the young lady is of foreign education and family, and is most skillful in these respects. I should find it difficult to carry forward my literary work without her able assistance."

He virtually sat erect, with a fine air, presently pushing back his chair.

Dunwoody looked from one to the other in perplexity. His face flushed. Meantime Josephine St. Alban arose, bowed and left them.

When the two men found themselves alone Dunwoody, for a time lost in moody silence, at length broke out into a peal of laughter. "Well, I make no comment, further than to say that I consider all the lady's fears were groundless. She has been well treated. There was no need to call for my aid. The army is hard to defeat, captain, and always was! But since when have countesses gone into secretarings? I accept my temporary defeat," said Dunwoody slowly. "We'll see. I told Jones and Judge Clayton and one or two others that I was pining for a little game of draw poker. What do you say? Should not all lesser questions be placed in abeyance?"

"That," said the other, "comes to me at the present moment in the nature of an excellent compromise measure. I am agreed!"

The players made a group not uninteresting as they gathered about the table in the deck saloon. Across the table from Carlisle sat Judge Henry Clayton of New Madrid, a tall and slender gentleman with silky white mustaches and imperial, gentle of speech, kindly of countenance.

At Clayton's side Dunwoody, younger, larger and more powerful, made something of a contrast. The last of the party was the Hon. William Jones, state senator from Belmont, Mo. Seating himself, the last named now began shuffling a pack between fingers short, puffy, freckled and experienced. His stooped shoulders thrust forward a beardless round face. His short, dark hair receded from a high forehead and a thick midbody betokened affluence and a high level of living. A planter of the back country and a politician, his capital was a certain native shrewdness and little else. He quoted frequently from Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

Of course, in company such as this, and at such a day, the conversation must turn inevitably to the ever fruitful topic of slavery. As they played they talked.

"I would suggest," said Dunwoody, "that before we tempt the gods of fortune we should first pour a libation for their favor. What do you say, sir?" He turned to Jones and winked at Clayton.

"No, no, no, sir! No, I thank you just as much, but I never drink more than once in a day. Unless—that is, of course—unless there is some very special occasion, such as this. But Tom!"—turning to the colored boy—"make it very light; ve-ry light. Hold on, that, not too light!"

The tokens were distributed and in accordance with the custom of the time, the table soon was fairly well covered with money of divers sorts, gold coin, a lesser amount of silver, bills issued by many and divers banks in this or that portion of the country.

Silence fell when the game really began. Half an hour and the passing of time was forgot.

At first the cards ran rather severely against the judge and rather in favor of Jones, who played with such thoroughness that presently there appeared before him a ragged pile of currency and coin. Dunwoody and Carlisle were losers, but finally Dunwoody began to edge in upon the accumulated winnings of his neighbor on the right. An hour passed, two hours, more. The boat plowed on downstream. Presently the colored boy began to light lamps. A frown came on the florid countenance of the young officer. The pile of tokens and currency before him lessened steadily. At last, in fact, he began to show uneasiness. He thrust a hand into a pocket where supplies seemed to have grown scarce. Dunwoody looked up from his own last hand.

"Don't leave us just yet, friend," he said. "You may draw on me for all you like, if you care to continue. We shall see that you get a ticket back home. No man can ask more than that!"

"Suppose I sit with you for one jack-pot, gentlemen," said Carlisle. "The hour is growing late for me, and I must plead other duties. When a man is both busy and broke it is time for him to consider."

"No, no," expostulated the Hon. William Jones, who long since had forgotten his rule regarding one drink a day. "No, no; not broke and not busy! Not at all!"

"I don't know," said Dunwoody. "Suppose we make it one more jack pot all around?" They agreed to this. It was Judge Clayton's deal.

"Gimme at least three," began the senator from Belmont, puckering out his lips in discontent.

"Three good ones," consented the judge. "How many for the rest of you?"

Dunwoody shook his head. "I'll stand as it is, please."

The judge quietly discarded two cards, Carlisle having done the same. The betting now went about with more than one increase from the Hon. William Jones, whose eyes apparently were seeing large. At last the "call" came from Carlisle, who smilingly moved the bulk of his remaining fortune toward the center of the table.

Thereupon, with a bland and sane smile, the Hon. William Jones shook his head and folded his cards together. The judge displayed queens and tens, the gentleman opposite queens and deuces. Dunwoody laid down his own hand, which showed aces and fours. They all sighed.

"Gentlemen, you all deserve to win," said Dunwoody. "I feel like a thief."

Judge Clayton rose, laughing, slapping Dunwoody on the shoulder and giving his arm to Mr. Jones, whom he assisted to his room.

THIRTY-TWO YEARS AGO.

Last Monday evening the engineers met at the engine house of Steamer No. 1 and voted that Chief Z. L. Bicknell and the engineers of Ward 5 be a building committee for the new engine house in South Weymouth and Engineers Bicknell and Williams with the chief purchase a new hose carriage for Ward 3.

The bark, Alice, which was recently launched from Keen's ship-yard was taken to Boston, and under the superintendence of Mr. Keen has been rigged, and a cargo of ice (1200 tons) put on board. She sailed this week Tuesday for Havana, and after leaving her cargo there, will return to New York and take a cargo for the eastern coast of Africa.

Whitman's pond has swelled so that the surface of the water is almost as high as the level of the road along by T. H. Humphrey's place of residence.

TWENTY-SIX YEARS AGO.

A few residents have had their water service cut off this week for non-payment of rates.

The forty-third annual concert and ball of the Weymouth Band, which takes place at Reynolds Hall next Thursday (Fast) night, bids fair to excel any that they have ever given before.

The 164th anniversary of the Second Congregational church, Henry Clay Alvord, pastor, will be observed at the chapel Friday evening, April 8, when the annual meeting will have more than its usual significance.

The North Weymouth Improvement association held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening, at the office of E. S. Beals Esq., there being a goodly number present. The several committees in making their reports, showed that they were alive and active in the interests of the association.

The widening of the railroad bridges between East Weymouth and Braintree having been completed, the work of laying the double track will be rapidly pushed forward, and it will probably be ready for use when the summer time table goes into effect.

At the annual meeting of the Choral society held at the office of Elias Richards last Monday evening, the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, Elias Richards; Vice, Richard A. Hunt; Secretary, Samuel W. Reed; Treasurer, Dana Smith.

The executive committee of the Weymouth Improvement Association met at the residence of Dr. W. F. Hathaway last Monday evening and made arrangements for the annual meeting to be held in Clapp's hall, Wednesday evening, April 13. The matter of re-erection of the flag pole which was removed from Washington Square, was discussed, and a majority deemed it advisable to dispose of the same, as the expense of erection and maintenance would be large.

SEVENTEEN YEARS AGO.

Columbian club of East Weymouth will celebrate Ladies' night this Friday evening and will have as its guest the Century club of North Weymouth.

The Fore River Engine company will launch Mr. Rhodes' steam yacht tomorrow between 12 and 1 o'clock. The burnham boat is in frame. Mr. Wellington has just returned from New York and he expects to get two orders for steam yachts.

The members of the North High school tendered a reception to the scholars of the South High, last Friday evening at Odd Fellows' Hall, East Weymouth. It was a most interesting event socially in the conduct of the school.

The Norfolk Cycle club will give their second annual ball at Fogg's opera house, South Weymouth, Friday evening, March 13. It will be quite the swiftest function of the season in this locality. Peter's orchestra has been engaged. Special cars will run to all the neighboring towns after the dance.

HOUGH AN AUTHORITY ON WESTERN LIFE

Emerson Hough, whose new novel, "The Purchase Price," will be run in this paper as a serial, has made an enviable reputation as a writer on western themes. It may be said truthfully of him that he has slept out of doors more, traveled more after big game and seen more of the actual life of the open than any other writer ever before the American public.

From his earliest years he felt the call of the west, and as soon as he could he went thither and, as he whimsically expresses it, "has been going ever since," for never a year passes without a trip into some wild country in search of big and dangerous game.
